7 Hijackers Slain in Mid-Air Battle, Terror Plunge

Times News Services

ADDIS ABABA — Six hijackers died and a seventh was fatally wounded today in a gun battle aboard an Ethiopian airliner as it plunged earthward with a hole torn in its side by a grenade.

But the pilot of the stricken Boeing 707 was able to land the craft at Addis Ababa airport a few minutes later.

Ethiopian Airlines said two security guards and four passengers were injured by grenade fragments. The plane was carrying about 100 passengers on a flight from Addis Ababa to Paris.

All of the hijackers — believed to be members of the seccessionist Eritrean Liberation Front — were killed by security guards. Six died aboard the plane and the seventh died in hosptal later.

One of the passengers injured in the blast, Temple University Prof. Roderich Hilisinger of Philadelphia, possibly saved the lives of many passengers by grabbing the grenade and throwing it into an unoccupied corner of the plane after a wounded hijacker pulled the pin and dropped it in the aisle.

The plane left Addis Ababa airport at about 4:30 a.m.

It was about 10 minutes out when a man suddenly appeared at the division between the first class and the economy seats with a pistol and a grenade.

Prof. Richard Wylie, 30, also of Temple University said. Wylie quoted the man as saying: "This is a hijack, stay in your seats."

"Dr. Hilsinger and I were sitting in the most forward seats of the economy class and the man was standing right beside us," Wylie said.

"No sooner had he said it was a hijacking, when one of the security guards opened fire and wounded the man. He staggered but managed to pull the pin from the grenade which he dropped right at the feet of Dr. Hilsinger, who had the aisle seat.

"Dr. Hilsinger immediately picked up the grenade and threw it into the opposite corner where the seats were unoccupied.

"It exploded there, tearing a great hole in the plane's side. Dr. Hilsinger took most of the force of the explosion, receiving shrapnel wounds in the face, shoulders and ankles.

"It was an extremely brave act by Dr. Hilsinger to throw the grenade away and probably saved many people from injury."

"The next 2½ minutes were an absolute nightmare," Wylie added. "Bullets were flying everywhere as the hijackers fought it out with the security men.

"The plane was full of smoke and when the grenade exploded, the plane dropped like a stone and we thought that this was the end.

"But the pilot managed to get control again and we landed safetly at Addis Ababa a few minutes later. It was a fine bit of piloting and the Ethiopian security guards did a marvellous job of work."

Hilsinger is in serious condition in Addis Ababa's American Adventist Hospital.

One of the dead sky pirates was a woman — killed as she threw herself across the body of a male accomplice, apparently to shield him from security guards' bullets.

In Damascus, the Eritrean Liberation Front today refused to confirm or deny responsibility for the hijack attempt. Front leaders, however, have recently pledged to escalate operations against Ethiopia in their continued effort to liberate the former Italian colony ceded to Ethiopia in 1945.

The Front has been blamed for previous hijack attempts in Ethiopia and as a result security guards are placed on all Ethiopian Airlines planes.

Needless Antibiotics 'Killing Thousands'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Perhaps tens of thousands of people in the U.S. are dying each year because of needlessly administered antibiotics, a top official of that country's Food and Drug Administration told a Senate subcommittee Thursday.

As well as the deaths, the lives of millions of people are endangered by the massive over-prescription and misprescription of drugs, Dr. Henry Simmons told a committee investigating over-the-counter drug sales.

Another doctor, Dr. Henry Dowling, an infections specialist and former chairman of the Council on Drugs of the American Medical Association echoed Simmons statements and added that drastic reforms are needed to deter physicians from prescribing antibiotics for diseases against which they are ineffective and for problems for which safer therapy is available.

U.S. doctors prescribe between 10 and 20 times antibiotics as is medically justified, Dowling told the committee.

"It is doubtful that the average person has an illness that requires treatment with an antibiotic more often than once every five or 10 years," he said.

The most popular antibiotics include the penicillins, effective against a narrow range of infections; erythromycin, effective against a medium spectrum, and the tetracyclines and chloramphenicol, effective against a broad spectrum.

The threat to the public health in excessive use of antibiotics arises from the fact that in killing certain strains of bacteria they permit other strains to flourish.

In one of the latest incidents of this kind, said Dowling, a strain of typhoid bacilli has been found to be resistant to ampicillin.

"A few years ago, we were resting secure in the knowledge that we had two effective drugs for use in typhoid fever: chloramphenicol and ampicillin," Dowling said.

"Then a strain of typhoid bacilli was found that was resistant to chloramphenicol, and now one is resistant to ampicillin. Where is our security now?" he asked.

"Before too long we may be back to the 1930s when we had no effective therapy for this disease and could only stand by and watch 10 to 15 per cent of the patients die, while others suffered through weeks of serious illness," Dowling warned.

The nick-of-time development of semi-synthetic pencillins brought the situation under control.

The FDA has warned that over-use of the semi-synthetics could deny protection against new outbreaks.

Much testimony centred on the record of production, promotion and prescribing of chloramphenicol, introduced in 1949 by Parke-Davis as chloromycetin.

SPEEDY REFUNDS

OTTAWA (CP) — Roughly 6.5 million Canadians are expected to get refunds when they file their 1972 income tax returns early next year, revenue department officials said Thursday.

And to get the money to them faster, the government has devised a special sticker that taxpayers can place on their tax-return envelopes to speed the journey through the processing mill.

A spokesman explained the sticker contains a postal code to be pasted over the existing code on the front of the preaddressed return envelope if a refund is being sought. The post office will sort these into seperate bags which will be expedited through the assessment process.

"There will be very many taxpayers anxious to file early and get their refunds early," Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury said in an interview.

Witnesses Flee Rape, Murder

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Virtually the entire 23,000 Jehovah's Witnesses in the East African nation of Malawi have fled the country in the last two months as a result of a government campaign against them, according to reports reaching here.

In a wave of violence that swept the country, a number of Jehovah's Witnesses were killed, raped or brutally beaten, the latest issue of the organization's magazine Awake reports.

It said that there were at least 10 known dead in Malawi and that the number might be as high as 60.

Diplomatic sources here said that they had received reports of between 12 and 20 having been killed.

Most of the community, about 18,000 Malawians, has crossed into Zambia, where its members have been placed in makeshift refugee camp near Chipata in the southeast corner of the country. The others fled into Mozambique.

Zambia rural development minister Reuben Kamanga, said last week after visiting the camp that an average of nine persons were dying every day, apparently of hunger. Many of these victims have been children.

The attacks against the sect were apparently touched off by a series of resolutions against "certain fanatical religious sects" passed at the annual conference of the ruling Malawi Congress Party in September.

The Jehovah's Witnesses were mentioned specifically.

The resolutions attacked the sects for hindering the eco-

Apollo Half Way

The big powerplant fired a two-second burst 9:03 p.m. PST. and Apollo 17 was more than halfway to the moon at the time.

The manoeuvre added seven miles an hour to the spaceship's 2,766 mph speed. That was enough to switch Apollo 17 from a course that would have hit the moon to a path that will take the astronauts an estimated 61 miles in front of the sphere when they brake into orbit.

ACUPUNCTURISTS CHARGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver acupuncturists were charged Thursday with unlawfully practising medicine.

A trial date of Feb. 2 was fixed by Judge Larry Eckhardt when Tsang Kwok Hong and Lum Gum Fung appeared before him in provincial court.

E. German Ties Okay

Times News Services

BRUSSELS — Foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization gave permission today for individual members of the 15-nation alliance to enter into negotiations to establish bilateral relations with East Germany.

But their 1,000-word communique issued at the end of a two-day ministerial council meeting reaffirmed continued NATO support for West Germany's policy of working "towards a state of peace in Europe in which the German people regain their unity through self-determination."

The communique did not specify the timing of the establishment of relations with East Germany.

In Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau said Canada will likely extend official diplomatic recognition to East Germany once a treaty of recognition is signed by East and West Germany.

U.S. Shows More Jobs, Prices Up

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — While the rate of unemployment in the U.S. is on the decline, inflation is making steady gains, according to two sets of statistics released today by the U.S. labor department.

The unemployment rate dropped last month from 5.5 per cent of the labor force to 5.2 per cent—the lowest figure in 27 months—with 82.5 million Americans holding jobs, the department said today.

A report released Thursday showed wholesale prices in the U.S. leaped ahead at an annual rate of 7.2 per cent last month. Farm and food products lead, as usual.

The price rise for the month —0.6 per cent both before and after seasonal adjustments— lifted the department's wholesale price index to 5.4 per cent above its level of a year ago, the point where wage and price controls began.

All a Plot —Young

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

CAMPBELL RIVER — There was a plot between the school's superintendent and a group of trustees to force high school principal John Young to quit, John Laxton, counsel for Young, told a judicial hearing in its 10th day today.

A set of 27 rules handed to Young on Aug. 3 were a "manufactured ultimatum designed to make Young resign."

"They well knew Young's educational philosophy would not allow him to accept these rules, which were illegal anyway," Laxton said.

"The rules were conceived in sin and illegitimate at birth."

Offering his final legal argument after the the three-man board of reference headed by Victoria lawyer B. J. B. Morahan, had heard testimony from 11 witnesses and received 103 exhibits, Laxton said a very high standard of proof was required in the matter of Young's professional position.

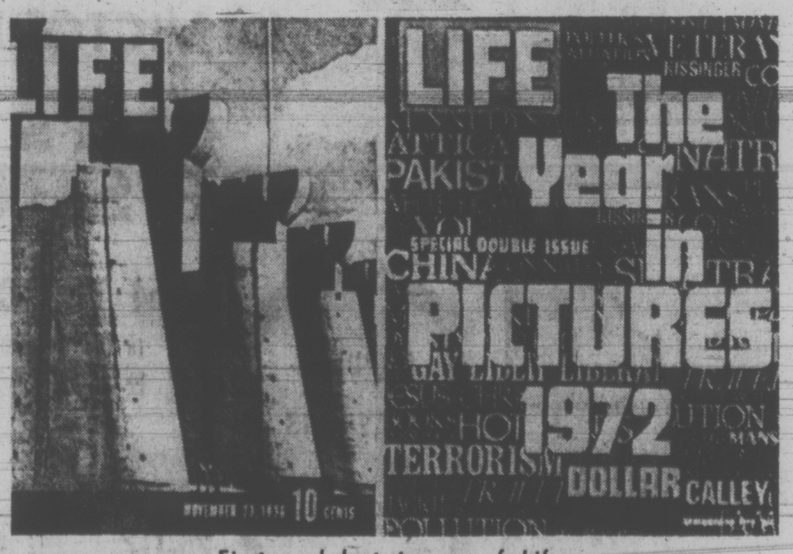
The set of 27 rules attempted to enforce attendance, parental notes of excuse and controlled registration on high school students. Laxton said they were "largely illegal, beyond the power of the board to promulgate and constituted a flagrant abuse of the board's powers."

In a detailed analysis, Young claimed that the administration of a school system in British Columbia has its powers and areas of jurisdiction strictly limited by statute.

He said a section of the Public Schools Act was even deemed necessary by the legislature to empower boards to control students' dress.

In drawing up its rules Campbell River School Board was attempting to rewrite the Public School Act, Laxton said.

"They are so blatantly wrong that Mr. Ramsay (superintendent) must have known it in advising the board."



First and last issues of Life

Death Comes to Life After 36 Years

NEW YORK (AP) — Life magazine will discontinue publication with the issue of Dec. 29, Time Inc. announced today.

The publisher said the 36-year-old magazine, famous for its pioneering use of news photographs, will be folded because of "continuing losses."

The year-end double issue will mark the close of the weekly magazine founded by Henry Luce in 1936.

Shortly after the announcement, Canadian publisher Joseph Azaria offered to negotiate for the purchase of the magazine. In a telegram from Montreal to the board chairman of Time-Life Inc., Azaria said he was "equipped to bring a successful management team to preserve the life of Life."

Life was published at "very substantial deficits in 1969 and 1970 and smaller deficits in 1971 and 1972," the publisher said.

"As our projections for 1973 took shape, however, they showed a resumption of heavy losses, and the indications for 1974 were even more unfavorable," the publisher, Time Inc., added.

At about 10:45 a.m., grim-faced staff members of the magazine began to gather for a meeting on the eighth floor of the Time-Life building at Sixth Avenue and 50th Street in Manhattan.

About 250 to 300 staff workers sat in chairs or stood against the walls, waiting for the meeting, which was closed to outsiders, to begin at 11 a.m.

Life lasted more than a year longer than its chief competitor, Look, which ceased publication on Oct. 19, 1971. Look also blamed rising costs, especially postal rates.

In the last two years, Life reduced its circulation from 8.5 million copies to 5.5 million and increased its newsstand price in an attempt to build a high-quality audience.

"The impact of these moves was undercut by a very heavy increase in second-class postal rates which affected Life, particularly because of its large page size, the executives' statement said.

They said the magazine was faced with an increase of 170.2 per cent in such rates over five years.

Walkout Hits Toronto Mail

TORONTO (CP) — About 600 postal workers walked off the job early today in Toronto city's main delivery building and at four postal stations in Scarborough and one in Downsview district in Metropolitan Toronto.

The wildcat walkouts were in protest against slow progress in negotiations at Ottawa for a new agreement between the post office and its unions.

Postal officials here planned to seek a court injunction today to get the dissidents back to work. A walkout of Toronto mail truck drivers in November was ended by a temporary injunction from Mr. Justice Lawrence Pennell of the Ontario Suprememe Court, and the post office may go before him again on three hours' notice.

At the downtown delivery office, where more than 300 handlers and sorters walked out, delivery men remained on duty and were expected to take out mail that arrived Thursday and was sorted. But about 500,000 pieces for northwest Toronto remained unprocessed. Today's arriving mail was not being handled.

At the Toronto building, letter carriers at first were held up by a picket line set up by the inside workers but later police cleared the way for them and they went to work.

About 180 carriers and clerks in Scarborough stayed off the job, and about 70 in both categories were idle in Downsview.

The workers are members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers and the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada.

Ed Roworth, post office information official, said the walkouts followed a news bulletin from John Potts, acting Toronto president of the postal workers' union, stating the treasury board had ruled out retroactive pay in any settlement with the post office employees.

Meanwhile in Ottawa, sources said a report of the conciliation board set up to deal with the dispute between the government and postal workers probably will be made public early next week.

In Edmonton, Postmaster General Andre Ouellet said the walkout was both "illegal and regrettable."

Ouellet said that because a conciliation report has not been handed down "the strike is illegal."

He said seven days must elapse following such a report before workers can walk out legally.

"We have a responsibility to the public and it is unfortunate that this action should take place at this time of year when mail is so heavy due to the holiday season."

Riding Academy Improved

The Victoria Riding Academy has received a favorable report from health authorities.

W. B. K. Carley, son of managers Mr. and Mrs. Don Carley, said today Oak Bay sanitary inspector Don Wakelyn has again inspected the academy and reported an improvement.

"We received a memo, dated Nov. 29, from Mr. Wakelyn in which he said there "are already several improvements in general maintenance" and commented that things in general were much better than when he and Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread visited there Oct. 22."

Whitbread, senior medical health officer, and Wakelyn visited the acadamy in October, two days after the elder Carleys were hospitalized after a traffic accident.

They are still recuperating from the accident.

Whitbread had given the Carleys a Feb. 28 deadline to meet demands set down in a confidential report to Oak Bay council.

After an in-camera session with council Whitbread agreed to co-operate with the Carleys and assist them in meeting requirements.

Their son said today that all of Whitbread's requirements will be met by the deadline.

Book Near Heat Blamed for Fire

A $15,000 fire that destroyed a 60-foot mobile home in Langford Wednesday morning was caused by a book left too close to an electric heater, Langford fire department said today.

Fire gutted the home of the Wayne Shepherd family, in the 2500 block Florence Lake Road at about 9:25 Wednesday morning.

Major Loss

CHILLIWACK (CP) — B.C. insurance companies stand to lose more than $150 million each year and many will have to seek new lines of insurance business when the provincial government takes over car insurance, Gerry McGaw of Chilliwack, B.C. director of the Canadian Confederation of Insurance Agents and Brokers, said Thursday.

Apathy Sinks Lynch Hopes

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Early vote counts in the Irish Republic's referendum on changing the status of the Roman Cathocli Church and giving votes to 18-year-olds showed a five-to-one majority today for the measures.

But apathy on the part of the 1.8-million electorate brought only a 50-per-cent turnout in Thursday's poll, a bitter blow to Prime Minister Jack Lynch's hopes of proving to Northern Ireland Protestants that the people of Eire are ready to compromise to achieve unity.

The main issue at the referendum was removal from the 1937 constitution of a clause recognizing the "special position" of the Catholic Church in the life of the republic.

Lynch hoped that a massive "Yes" vote would show Protestants in Northern Ireland that the predominantly Catholic republic was ready to make concessions to achieve unity.

Although he still is expected to win the referendum, the low voter turnout could add to the already dismissive stance that militant Protestants in the north have adopted towards it.

Political observers said that apathy, cold weather, and a belief that overwhelming support for the government was assured, could have combined to produce the low vote.

Meanwhile, in Belfast, Northern Ireland's Murder Task Force, formed two days ago to trap the faceless assassins who have slain more than 100 persons this year, began hunting today the men who brutally killed a leading Protestant militant.

The hooded body of Ernest Duke Elliott, 28, was found with what police described as "terrible head injuries" and bullet wounds in the back of a panel truck in Belfast Thursday.

The paramilitary Ulster Defence Association—the powerful answer of Protestant extremists to the Roman Catholic-based Irish Republican Army—said Elliott was a lieutenant-colonel in its ranks.

As such he probably was the most politically-important victim in the 107-name-long list of sectarian assassinations. It was believed to be the first case of a UDA murder and definitely the first of a man of such prominence.

Since, published warnings have long stated the drug caused a fatal blood disease in users at a rate estimated at one in 24,200 to one in 40,500, depending on dose.

Yet by 1960 physicians had prescribed it for an estimated 40 million persons.

FDA production data indicate that more than 600,000 Americans got it this year alone.

Official FDA prescribing instructions long have warned physicians that chloramphenicol is the preferred drug only against rare typhoid fever and "must not be used in the treatment of trivial infections or where it is not indicated, as in colds, influenza, infections of the throat; or as a prophylactic agent to prevent bacterial infections."

Even so, Simmons said, physicians today prescribe chloramphenicol "inappropriately" in an "overwhelming majority" of cases.

"Only last year we received a report of a 25-year-old man who was seen by his doctor for a sore throat and received chloramphenicol for nine days," Simmons said.

"He developed aplastic anemia within two months and died within four months."

nomic and politcial development of the country and said that they should be dismissed from government jobs and discouraged from all business and farming activity.

The Jehovah's Witnesses were officially banned by Malawi in 1967 and subsequently went underground.

A spokesman for the Malawi embassy here said that the sect was outlawed because they had been encouraging people not to pay taxes or sing the national anthem.

Don Adams, foreign service secretary for the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, as the religious group is formally called, said that this was not true.

He said that this was the third time the sect had had problems in Malawi and that each time the issue was over buying membership cards in the Congress Party, the country's sole political organization.

The Malawi government, he said, considers this a form of taxation, and not buying cards is considered an act of disobedience.

But the Witnesses regard this as the joining of political party, which they oppose on religious grounds.

It's Time to Fill The Bird Feeders

Yes, you could say that the current spell of frigid weather will be hard on the birds. You could say it, but as with most generalities, you'd only be partially right.

Many kinds of birds, over the short haul at least, are unaffected by such things as sub-freezing temperatures, snow and raging winds. Sea birds for example, will simply find a sheltered cove and continue to enjoy the bounties of the sea.

Even some kinds of land birds will find little to fear from the cold. Raptors, such as Cooper's Hawk, which hunt by day, or the great-horned owl which does its thing mostly under cover of darkness, will find the pickings a little easier than usual.

Not only will they have less difficulty spotting their prey against the snow but they'll find an easy harvest of sick and weak small birds unable to meet the sudden demands of a cold wave.

And here we come to the crunch: it'll be among the small, seed, insect and fruit-eating birds that the highest toll will be extracted by the inclement weather.

Most birds which winter in these latitudes are adequately endowed with what it takes to survive whatever the fickle weather has to offer. But occasionally, when all the elements combine to produce extreme conditions—as they most certainly have this week—their normal buffers against the cold may not be enough.

Then it becomes a job of balancing the tremendous amount of heat lost through the surfaces of their bodies against the already-restricted available food supply. For birds, this is a particularly onerous task. They must not only maintain normal body temperatures, which may range as high as 113 degrees for some kinds of thrushes, but they must do it for 24 hours when only 8 or 9 hours are available for feeding.

If they are unable to find enough fuel, in the form of high quality food, to keep their metabolic motors running through the night, they will not survive.

Fortunately, birds possess a wonderfully-simple asset in this battle against the elements—their covering of feathers. One of the best insulating materials known, feathers, not only keep out the cold in winter, but help keep out the heat in summer.

Take a look at a robin today. In all probability he'll look like a big "fat" healthy bird by our standards. But all he'll really be is a robin trying to protect himself against the cold. His so-called "fat" look will result from thousands of contour feathers being fluffed out to create hundreds of insulating dead-air spaces between the outside cold and his warm body.

The same robin, on a summer day, will be a sleek, streamlined and air-cooled individual with his feathers pressed close against his body.

For most birds, their feather covering is more dense in winter. A goldfinch, for example, will have more than 1,000 additional contour feathers to help it in its winter survival struggle.

But ultimately, success in the battle with the elements for all animals, depends on food.

The current snow cover and frozen ground has denied a highly nutritious source of food to many birds. Food such as earthworms and many other soil dwellers, must now be replaced with less nutritious foods such as berries.

Even the seeds, so rich in protein and so important to many kinds of ground-feeding sparrows, are buried under up to three inches of snow.

It's bad enough losing such foods at any time but when the demands of survival in cold temperatures require that more food be eaten than usual, this loss becomes critical.

Many of you will want to come to the aid of our hard-pressed birds at a time like this. Please do, but remember your efforts, and all others of like mind, will amount to a rather small drop in a large bucket. Still it seems worth the effort.

So, scatter some chick scratch, spread some peanut butter and hang out some suet. But most of all, hope for more normal weather.

A Stunning Byelection Win for U.K. Liberals

LONDON (CP) — The Liberal party rejoiced today over a byelection victory which has caused a sensation in the world of British politics.

The triumph Thursday is being described as "astonishing" and "staggering" by national newspapers and even Lord Carrington, chairman of the governing conservative party, conceded that the liberal achievement in the south London suburban riding of Sutton and Cheam was remarkable.

The Tories, who had previously held the seat, were hit by an adverse voting swing of 32 per cent as 29-year-old Graham Tope, gearing his campaign to a variety of local issues, piled up a Liberal plurality of 7,417 in a five-man field.

But the Conservatives were compensated for their Sutton setback by victory in a second Thursday byelection, which saw them holding back a much-vaunted challenge from the Labor party.

The Tories retained Uxbridge, another constituency in the south London suburbs, and thus rounded out a disastrous election day for Labor.

Conservative Michael Shersby won the Uxbridge seat with a plurality of 1,078 votes.

The seat was vacant due to the death of Charles Curran.

A byelection was called in Sutton following the appointment of Richard Sharples as governor of Bermuda.

The two Thursday results left the Conservatives with a still-considerable majority of 25 in the Commons.

The standing: Conservatives 325; Labor 286; Liberals 8; Scottish Nationalist and Republican Labor parties, one seat each; Independents 3; vacancies 2; Speaker and Deputies 4.

For the Liberals, Sutton was the second great byelection victory this year and a success even more impressive than their legendary triumph at Orpington in 1962.

The Liberals seized a Labor seat at Rochdale six weeks ago.

They still have only eight Commons seats and it may be that Sutton will turn out to be merely a temporary triumph.

But party leader Jeremy Thorpe hailed it as a major breakthrough in Liberal efforts to regain some of the political lustre long-since lost by an organization once all-powerful under prime ministers like Lloyd George and Gladstone.

The Labor defeats — which included a poor third-place showing at Sutton — brought a blast from Lord George-Brown, formerly a power in the opposition party and still resentful about former prime minister Harold Wilson's stand against the forthcoming British entry into the European Common Market.

George-Brown called for a change in Labor's "present associations and policies" — or else a change in party leadership.

A Day for Adults

The turnout of voters at annual elections may be taken as an index of the state of civic consciousness — of the public's ability to govern itself. On many occasions in the past the voter participation in the city and the adjacent municipalities has been shockingly low. This may be one reason why some of the local problems appear to rise from the inabilities or limited information of council members. Certainly the Greater Victoria community over the years has had more than its share of mixups and second thoughts regarding major problems of municipal policy. Does an apathetic public get what it deserves?

This year there are no mayoral elections, but the questions facing each of the municipalities are important enough — crucial enough — to bring out a large number of voters. Mature men and women should not leave their community's decisions to their neighbors; more is demanded of them than that. And there is no doubt that a healthy public interest in municipal affairs encourages candidates of higher calibre to come forward to serve.

It is well that most of the candidates this year have indicated their interests in a broad spectrum of problems; naturally some are particularly concerned with certain fields. A candidate who has only one arrow to his bow may perform very well in that particular area, but council membership calls for a much wider knowledge. It is fine to put in a candidate who is dedicated to, say, noise prevention. But he must also have competence in regard to sewers, finance, development policy, and other major considerations. This is not always the case.

Nor should eve-of-election revelations about expense accounts of aldermen be given much weight in a voter's decision. Waste or self-indulgence, of course, cannot be condoned. But elected representatives who are sent by the city as named delegates to official functions, or who take part in officially approved meetings, study groups and other work involving travel, should not be begrudged their expenses. A council member's performance, contribution, judgment and common sense — or in the case of a new candidate, his likelihood of meeting these standards — are the chief criteria.

Every eligible voter owes it to himself or herself and to the community to create the best council possible by casting a ballot. Of all the reasons for decay or deterioration in a community, apathy is the least defensible.

". . . it's reassuring to see that he's still hanging around with us . . ."

Revising Juvenile Treatment

Unless the geneticists are wrong, Provincial Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi seems to be stretching the definition when he says that 13 to 16 year old children who encounter difficulties with the authorities are not bad — just disturbed or emotionally upset. If a percentage of humanity is "bad" — and the evidence points that way — then the influence of genes can scarcely be expected to be dormant in the 13 to 16 year age group.

The minister is nevertheless on sound ground when he advocates improved and expanded treatment for juveniles guilty of anti-social conduct. And it is to be hoped that his specific effort to reduce numbers and increase the success of treatment at Brannan Lake School is successful.

For a number of years critics have pointed to the difficulties encountered in that centre because too great a demand is being placed on its facilities, and because the continual inflow of youngsters for whom no other accommodation is available pushes out others before the school's treatment has had time to be thoroughly effective.

Certainly the public, distressed as generations of elders before it have been distressed by unacceptable behavior of some juveniles, will hope that more effective treatment will be feasible. Mr. Levi will find widespread sympathy for his assertion that "this government will not let teenagers be kept in jail." But the minister will also have to take note of the climate of the day and provide facilities which not only bear promise of helping erring youth, but also of protecting the public from the activities of that small minority of juveniles who seem almost as vicious as they are young.

Thick Idda Head

The incredible credulity of believers in the efficacy of highly advertised remedies for the common cold has received another numbing blow. Any number of the pills, say two doctors long experienced in research into colds, don't contain enough of the ingredients usually prescribed for this indisposition but do, in many cases, include elements which have none of the effects claimed for them.

The faith-shattering exposures, however, do not indicate any sure cure for the ailment which strikes almost everybody, frequently at this season of the year.

There are, of course, several treatments pleasant to the non-teetotaller and equally as ineffective as the no-longer-miracle pills. Or there's always the alternative of calling the physician to let him prescribe bed, two aspirins and lots of fluids.

If all else fails, the patient can always try to learn to live with it for several days — which he has to do, no matter what prescription he favors.

JAMES H. GRAY

'Get the Money Where It Is'

CALGARY—In any nationwide argument over money, the first victim, according to legend, is usually objective truth. The Alberta Government sparked this argument with its announcement that it needs more money and is going to get a lot of it from the outside users of Alberta natural gas. As the controversy develops over whose ox is to be gored, the clouds of obfuscation are rapidly descending.

The Calgary Herald recently defended the announced decision to force the wellhead price for gas to near double its present level for outside consumers. The reserves of natural gas belong to the people of Alberta, it argued, and the government had a responsibility to establish prices that benefitted the people of Alberta.

Canadians will hear the changes rung on that argument in coming weeks. That the claim that the Alberta gas belongs to the people is utter hogwash will not deter the change-ringers.

Bought and Paid For

The vast bulk of the gas reserves of Alberta belongs not to the people but to the international oil companies. These companies paid hundreds of millions of dollars to the Alberta Government for the rights to reservations on which to drill for oil and gas. They spent more hundreds of millions of dollars to drill the thousands of wells which discovered and developed these reserves. They invested still more hundreds of millions of dollars in plants to process the gas for market.

The proportion of these expenditures which went into the government coffers were lavished on the people of Alberta in the form of hospitals, highways, schools, welfare. Much of the balance went to the people of Alberta in jobs and business opportunities.

Only after these expenditures had been made did the gas become marketable. It became marketable at a time when both oil and gas were caught in a buyers' market. The original gas purchase contracts between the pipeline companies and the producers were negotiated at prices that provided little if any return on investment.

Most of the contracts provided for escalation in prices over the term of the contract, with full renegotiation at the end of 10 or 15 years. The industry is now entering a new pricing period in a buyers' market. The Alberta Government has announced that it proposes to insist that all new contracts are negotiated at much higher prices.

But if the reserves are all in private hands, how can the government fix the price negotiated between the owner-producers and the pipeline companies? The answer lies mainly in the fact that the Government retains a one-sixth royalty on all the gas produced. It also controls production.

The notion that Alberta gas reserves are owned by the people is a widespread delusion. It can be quickly demolished by analogy. Let's suppose an heir sells his estates for a whopping cash payment. He uses the money to indulge a taste for luxury, buys sports cars for all his kids and becomes a patron of the arts and sciences.

PREMIER LOUGHEED

As the money runs out he discovers the purchaser of his estate has developed it and sold it at ten times the purchase price. Any heir who went back and demanded a cut of the profits would be laughed out of any court in the land.

The Government of Alberta, is in a slightly different position from the profligate heir. In effect it retained a one-sixth interest. It therefore can insist on a substantial boost in the price it is paid for its one-sixth of the gas production of the province. From the figures being kicked around, the indication is that the Alberta Government expects to benefit to the extent of around $36 million from increased prices for its gas.

As the other five-sixths of the production belongs to the international oil companies, any increase in price will benefit them, in the aggregate, five times what it will benefit Alberta. To wit: $180 millions to $36 millions.

The gain will be more apparent than real. In addition to increasing its take from gas, the Government is on record that it is going to tap the oil industry for another $75 million or so with a tax on oil reserves or increased royalties, whichever the industry prefers. There is no way the industry can pass that bite on to the consumers. Balancing the gains on the gas swings against the losses on the oil merry-go-rounds would indicate an improvement of oil industry profits of something in the order of $100 millions a year, give or take $25 or $30 millions.

Muddying the Wicket

It can be argued with some merit that improvement will only be making gains for the losses suffered on natural gas sales in the early years of the contract. But regardless of the cogency of such arguments, the improvement muddies up the wicket for the Lougheed Government.

The conjuring trick it is now trying to perform is outrageously difficult. It must protect its political flanks from the consequences of unduly enriching the international oil companies from its gas pricing policies; it must be careful not to dip so deeply into the oil revenue tills that it discourages exploration in Alberta; it must avoid a constitutional confrontation over natural gas pricing; it cannot bring the solvency of the transportation companies or eastern industrial users into hazard; and above all it cannot antagonize Albertans by forcing domestic natural gas prices above their present levels.

But the Lougheed Government insists that it has to have more money and that it is going to get it where the money is — out of a whopping increase in the price of natural gas. If the Premier can convince eastern Canadians that they should lie back and enjoy the inevitable he will be the greatest magician since Houdini.

CHARLES BARTLETT

The Turn Towards Europe

WASHINGTON — As the Nixon plans unfold here, it appears the emphasis will be more foreign than domestic, the focus will be on Europe and not Asia, and the strategy will be a bold attempt to revitalize the Atlantic partnership by negotiating a mishmash of political and economic adjustments.

The new relationship with the Soviets was constructed upon an interweaving of politics and economics and this is how the President means to rebuild the NATO ties. Impressed by the intricate co-ordination between Henry Kissinger and Peter Peterson in the Soviet dealings and gratified by their success at trading economic concessions for political objectives, Mr. Nixon wants them to collaborate again on West Europe.

Undecided

The initiative is not yet set because Peterson, as intense and peripatetic a figure as Kissinger since he arrived here 20 months ago, has not decided whether he will stay in government. He and Kissinger are exploring the terrain and examining how the multiple concerns that beset the Alliance may be approached. If Peterson agrees to tackle the job, he may be more usefully positioned as an Ambassador in Brussels than as Secretary of Commerce.

The venture is a noble, timely concept because the Alliance's little strains, like where Europe buys its oranges, are growing into huge ones, like a U.S. balance of payments deficit (with Europe) which may reach $3 billion in 1973. The great difficulty is that Europe is not particularly concerned because it is dominated by its bureaucrats and preoccupied with its fledgeling unity.

While these strains have diverse causes, the underlying problems may be easier to solve in a lump than separately. By lumping them, the Kissinger-Peterson team will have brighter hopes of getting Europe's attention and finding compromises that mix gains with concessions to make the new Atlantic era more digestible for all.

Japan has to be part of the lumping process because her penetration of the American market has inspired a Nipponese phobia in Europe. Many of her problems interlock with the Western world. As Peterson warned recently, the combined energy deficit for the United States, Japan, and Europe can reach $62 billion by 1980 and this could suffice to provoke "a cannibalistic scramble" among the deficit countries as they struggle to meet their bills.

PETER PETERSON

So everything will go into the problem-solvers' negotiating basket: the energy question; the agricultural issues; the Nixon round of negotiations on tariffs and other trade barriers; the new monetary system; the range of divergences on defense; the sensitive issues of consultation; and the prospects for an exchange of military and non-military technology.

This points to the kind of negotiation in which the Europeans might secure their own nuclear weapons or breeder reactors in exchange for an agricultural arrangement that will avert the exclusion of American products from the continent. Since it is no longer sensible to treat commercial matters as a secondary concern, the task will be, as Peterson has said, to find an intersection of national interests involving trade, energy, and security.

Campaign Investments

The task will not be facilitated by the protectionist mood in Congress. Labor has tightened its hold on many Democrats and improved the outlook for its trade-restrictive Burke-Hartke bill by heavy donations to the campaigns. Some warn, within White House councils, that the pursuit of tariff negotiating authority from Congress may be a futile exercise.

Peter Flanigan is pulling together the President's options for study in early January. The decision on a strategy will come quickly because the President is anxious to get moving on Europe. In fact many believe he will travel there in February to rally Willie Brandt, Georges Pompidou, and Edward Heath to meet the challenge of the negotiating basket.

This haste is important because prompt steps will discourage the Europeans from falling into the dangerous habit of building their new identity on opposition to the United States.

Goodacre Lake

Thank you for the article "Otter Upsets Duck Lovers" (December 4) in your paper.

I should like to address myself to the estimable Mr. C. Bate, Superintendent of Parks, Victoria, and in particular, to his comments to your reporter that "Hargreaves' statements are an exaggeration." Well, Mr. Bate, it is your prerogative to state your views of my views, and likewise it is my prerogative to submit a contradiction. "Exaggeration" is a relative term, so I ask you in this open letter the following:

Point: The beautiful fountain in the south pond is there for what purpose? And the lovely wooded stream north to Goodacre Lake is there for what purpose?

Point: The outstanding stone and cement landing on Goodacre Lake (just off Douglas Street) replete with benches is there for what purpose?

Point: The ugly planks and unfinished work on the island are there for what purpose?

Point: You informed me that your water budget of $1500 for the year is now depleted, hence no more running water from the fountain to the lake. Reason for low water level—no rains in the summer. You do not have a contigency amount, not even $100, to bring the level up?

Point: You say the ducks are not going to migrate anywhere else. Tell me, where are the Hooded Merganzers, the Lesser Sauks, the Buffle Heads, most of the Canvas Backs? Where are they—not in Beacon Hill Park.

Point: The population of our feathered friends is depleted day by day, and now with a freeze-up they cannot find open water.

Point: "No need to get alarmed" you say because the otter has upset the duck feeding habits. Mr. Bate, go to the park each morning and see for yourself the imbalance of the ducks' life—they need water, freedom to use water. They don't have it. I exaggerate, you say. On the contrary, sir, I say that you oversimplify — "bureaucratically" oversimplify.

Thank you, Mr. Editor, and Mr. Vipond for the attention given and interest shown re the "Dilemma of the Ducks". Once again I think it has given the old cliche "You can't fight city hall" a solid uppercut! E. E. Hargreaves, 360 Douglas St.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of December 8, 1912:

VANCOUVER — In a manner as simple as it was efficient, a lone masked bandit held up and robbed every passenger in the chair car on the C.P.R. train, Imperial Limited, which left here on Saturday night at 7:45 o'clock. The systematic clean-up was made as the train was running along the shores of the inlet between the sugar refinery and some two miles east of Hastings. The number of passengers robbed was seven or eight. The car conductor was the only member of the train crew to see the robber and was relieved of $30. The total booty secured by the bandit was $308 and a few articles of jewelry.

Enforcing the Law—At the Discretion of Police

"Hello, is this the police?"

"Yes, Madam, what is the problem?"

"He is coming up to get me."

"Where are you, Madam?"

"He is coming up to get me and he is going to kill me."

"Where are you, Madam?"

"At home."

"Where?"

"230 Sutton Avenue."

"Who's coming to get you?"

"George."

"How do you know?"

"He just telephoned and said he would take the kid."

"Is it his child, Madam?"

"Yes."

"Is he living with you?"

"Yes."

"When is he coming?"

"Now."

"Why would he want to kill you?

"I don't know."

"Does he have a weapon?"

"I don't know."

The foregoing is a record of a call for assistance recently received at police headquarters of a municipal police force in a mid-western city of 150,000 population.

The communications officer looked at the number of police cars available and their approximate location in the city. At the time there were only two cars available in an adjacent district. One was tied up in a car-truck collision; the other was investigating a house-breaking complaint.

The officer responded: "Madam, if George arrives and causes any trouble you call the station and we will send a car."

He then hung up. A decision had been made not to send a police car to respond to this demand for service. The constable who received the call made a decision which was based upon a scarcity of police resources available at that particular time. It may also have been based on his own sense of priorities as it related to a domestic dispute. It was obvious that the caller was of Indian ancestry, a group which requires more police resources in this particular city than any other group of citizens.

In fact, George did show up and assaulted the woman caller who was his common-law wife. As a result of this communication officer's decision not to call upon law-enforcement resources, a crime was committed. A woman who called for police assistance found that none was made available.

Since more than 90 per cent of all police contacts with citizens are made as a result of complaints telephoned into the police communication centre the discretionary decision made by the communications officer has important consequences for any consideration of the criteria upon which the invocation of the criminal process is based.

In Canada the criminal laws are defined and legislated by the federal government, the administration of those laws is the responsibility of the provinces. Yet the budget for enforcement of law in urban areas is a municipal responsibility.

There are not enough financial resources available in most municipalities to enforce all the laws against all the offenders all of the time. As a result, the body that is defining crime and providing criminal legislation has little or no relation to those who have to make the budgetary decisions in the light of local urban realities.

Limited municipal resources for police purposes inevitably result in the establishment of priorities for enforcement. The discretion is left with the police to utilize their limited resources on the basis of a set of priorities which are at best ill-defined. There are no guidelines or principles for the exercise of such discretion in the enforcement of some laws and the non-enforcement of others.

The growth in the number of criminal and regulatory offences without a corresponding growth in police manpower is another factor leading to the selective enforcement of laws.

Given the increasing total number of crimes in the community and the fairly stable police manpower, the concept of total enforcement gives way to the realistic application of police resources to those

By BRIAN A. GROSMAN

(Grosman is professor of law at the University of Saskatchewan and has recently completed a study of police administration across Canada. His findings will be published next year. This is taken from an article prepared for The Globe and Mail.)

areas where, on the basis of some executive determination, they are most needed.

For example, if trafficking in narcotics looms large in the community, the chief of police may decide that some of his men on the morality squad must be shifted from that specialty to the enforcement of the laws against drug-trafficking. Accordingly, there are fewer men available to police prostitution, liquor offences, the sale of obscene literature, gambling and the other offences normally part of the morality squad's caseload.

Thus, discretion is used at the executive level where the decision is made on the assignment of men to certain areas of crime and at the lowest level in the force where the decision is made on how to perform the actual policing function within the areas assigned. These organizational priorities and individual values operate at a stage prior to the discretionary decision involved in making an arrest.

Unlike more bureaucratic organizations, the lowest-ranking member of the police force exercises wide discretion over how his task is to be performed. It is this individual police decision which defines the limits of law-enforcement. On an individual basis the police officer exercises discretion not only within the limits of the law but within the limits of the officer's power as an agent of social control.

The police decision to arrest is not only a response to the requirements of criminal law but represents the individual arresting officer's own sense of priorities combined with his assessment of what he believes are the policy preferences of the police organization. Although his decisions are far from being haphazard or idiosyncratic, they cannot always be directly related to legislative, judicial or even community preferences.

The police then are an important policy-making agency even though the general public assumption is that they are not.

If the public recognizes any policy-making power by the police it is assumed that these policies are formulated by the local police commission in discussions with the police chief but that policemen themselves exercise limited discretion and do not make policy.

Although the local police commission in consultation with the chief does engage in policy formulation, it is primarily related to budget, discipline and personnel problems.

There is little public recognition on the part of police leadership of the major policy-making power exercised by individual policemen.

Policemen spend most of their time in what are primarily peace-keeping and service activities. The enforcement of law takes up only a small percentage of their time. Policemen mediate private disputes, decide what to do with juveniles hanging around street corners and break up fights.

They intervene in matrimonial disputes, answer complaints about noise and rowdiness, settle disputes between neighbors and engage in a variety of other service activities between 6 p.m. and 9 a.m. when alternative service facilities are unavailable.

Accordingly, the individual policeman weighs social and his own individual values when making decisions relating to peace-keeping, public service and law-enforcement activities.

These decisions are often made without regard to statute, in most cases without review by any superior, without any report of reasons for handling the matter one way rather than the other and without any need to show consistency of handling cases based on similar facts.

To increase the sensitivity of policemen and police leadership to minority interests, needs and values, requires more than mere reliance upon the positive public relations potential of stepped-up recruitment from minority groups. Sensitivity may best be brought about by innovative police training that recognizes the critical potential of individual discretionary decisions and promotes discussion of discretionary alternatives and their applicability to a variety of cultures as well as situations.

The open recognition within the police academy itself that policemen don't just follow rules will hopefully result in a consideration of how best to exercise that discretion without violating legal and procedural structures. Any attempt to confine police discretion within rigid rules is doomed to failure.

For no matter what the rules or supervision, effective policing will continue to depend upon the individual exercise of discretion. There has developed, however, as a by-product of recent writings on police discretion, a new sensitivity on the part of police leadership to the discretionary component of the policeman's role in the enforcement of law.

CANADA AND VIETNAM

Hell No, We Won't Go

By JAMES EAYRS

September 3, 1954, found the members of the Innternational Commission for Supervision and Control in Vietnam in a self-congratulatory, even mellow, mood. They were beginning to settle into their new duties as chaperons of peaceful disengagement. Their work was going well. They had established a modest but adequate headquarters at the Hotel Metropole in Hanoi.

Their chairman, Dr. J. J. Khosla of India, was proceeding to another post, and his Canadian and Polish colleagues were showering him with tributes. The Commission had met 17 times without a single disagreement.

Much of the credit for its success, Canada's ambassador R. M. Macdonnell remarked, belonged to the chairman for his unremitting efforts to keep things going under trying conditions. The harmonious atmosphere in the Commission, Poland's ambassador P. Ogrodzinski remarked, was the result of the chairman's patient and tireless leadership. Dr. Khosa, beaming, thanked his colleagues for their kind words. It was noon. There was time for a dip in the pool at the Cercle Sportif, and Campari-sodas before lunch.

Glaring Contrast

Those were the days, my peacekeeping friends. Too bad for us all they had to end.

More than eighteen years later, a Canadian government is once more giving anxious thought as to whether or not to accept membership for us on an international commission to supervise a cease-fire in, and if possible bring peace to, Southeast Asia. But the contrast between the circumstances of 1954 and those of 1972 could hardly be more glaring.

In 1954, the prospects for a lasting settlement seemed reasonably good. France, the departing belligerent, was getting out in earnest: after Dienbienphu and with Algeria in turmoil the French people had had enough. Their mission civilisatrice in South-east Asia, reaching back into the 19th century, was over. Vietnamese could run their own affairs. Elections were to be held within two years; these might bring Ho Chi Minh to power in the South, but that was better than dragging on the war.

Prospects Bleak

Such were the calculations — guardedly optimistic — of prospective peacekeepers of that era. They did not know, they could not have known, how soon these would be overturned as the United States replaced France as the imperial power of the area and began another war.

What are the prospects for peace in 1972? Almost wholly bleak — and this time everybody knows it.

The departing belligerent is not cutting his losses and running. While all but 27,000 of his expeditionary force once numbering more than half a million troops has been withdrawn, his airpower — now deployed with unprecedented savagery — remains. American advisers, in civilian dress but on military or para-military missions, pour into South Vietnam.

Most ominously of all for peace, a U.S.-trained, U.S.-equipped, U.S.-paid and U.S.-advised army is locked in a ferocious struggle resembling more and more a civil war. No cease-fire ordered from far away places is likely to make such antagonists give up their fight.

What would be the fate of peacekeepers in so hostile a millieu? At best frustration born of vainly trying to keep track of cease-fire violations on what is virtually a battleground. At worst getting caught in the cross-fire.

Even in 1954 the Canadian government knew that the lot of a South-east Asian peacekeeper was not to be a happy one; it had accepted the assignment, it stated at the time, "with full knowledge and appreciation of the responsibilities and difficulties that will go with membership." That statement from Ottawa today would bring only mirthless laughter from any Canadians luckless enough to have to carry out a mission all but impossible.

A second contrast is in our credentials for that mission.

Our credentials in 1954 were not those of impartiality or neutrality. We were not chosen for those attributes, nor did we possess them. We were chosen as the West's representative on the troika, just as Poland was chosen as the East's — with India in-between. Not any Western state would do: Belgium was rejected by the communists for being too much the agents of the French. But we were thought to be as fair-minded as any NATO member could be, and got the nod for that.

At first we were able to live up to our reputation for fair-mindedness, even in the eyes of so waspish a critic as India's Krishna Menon. But then (Menon later told an interviewer) it became "very difficult." Our peacekeepers, he claimed, "were extremely unreasonable. They were playing the American game."

Krishna Menon must know now what he did not know at the time. We were doing more than siding with the Americans. We were furnishing them with military intelligence. We even delivered their threats of destruction.

Conveyed Warning

"The clearest explanations of U.S. policy and warnings of U.S. intent" — so the Pentagon Papers record — "were communicated to Hanoi on June 18, 1964, by the Canadian International Control Commissioner Seaborn. In a long meeting with Premier Pham Van Dong, Seaborn presented a carefully prepared statement of U.S. views and intentions to the North Vietnamese Premier, clearly warning him of the destructive consequences of a continuation of is present course."

By allowing its International Control Commissioner to veer so far from his peacekeeper's mandate as to act as a choreboy for Moloch, the government of Canada soiled our credentials for South-east Asian peacekeeping if ever the war were to end.

MENON
. . . waspish critic

A third contrast between the circumstances of 1954 and those of 1972 relates to the time we had then and now to think it over.

'Came as Shock'

In 1954 we had very little time. "The invitation to Canada to be a member of the tripartite I.C.C.," writes a former diplomat with six years' experience of our work in the Commissions, "came as a shock to Ottawa." There was much in it to give the policy-makers pause, not least the fact that "the Americans offered us neither support nor understanding." But "the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs never doubted for a moment that it was an obligation we had to accept . . . To have rejected it would have caused the whole settlement to become unstuck . . ." So we accepted it.

In 1972 we've had all the time in the world to think it over. And the more time there is to think of rushing once more unto the South-east Asian breach, the more evident become the reasons for letting someone else take a turn — the likelihood of continued fighting, the elusiveness of political settlement, the eagerness of the Americans to have us as their agents, our previous deviations from the peacekeeper's proper role. When the signal comes from Washington, we should answer loud and clear: "Hell, no! We won't go!"

MINING THE LOOPHOLE FOR PROFIT

LAST POST

Has the Iron Ore Company of Canada been defrauding the Quebec government of hundreds of thousands of dollars in taxes?

This question was raised October 2 by Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque and PQ vice-president Jacques Parizeau, who had obtained, through what they described as the "involuntary services" of the company, the financial statements of Iron Ore.

Iron Ore is wholly owned by a consortium of seven American Steel companies and is not required to issue public reports.

According to a PQ press release, the financial statements "reveal an extraordinary contrast between 1970 and 1971. For 1970, the company declares an operating profit in Quebec equal to one sixth of its total operating profit, while its sales of Quebec ore represent about the same proportion of its total sales.

"But in 1971, a prodigious change takes place. The Iron Ore Company of Canada declares a profit of $515,000 in Quebec and one of $55 million in Newfoundland!"

Iron Ore deposits in the region of the company town of Schefferville straddle the undulating Quebec-Newfoundland border, making it virtually impossible to determine which ore came from which province. Mining taxes are substantially lower in Newfoundland than in Quebec.

Parizeau said there were three ways that the company could irregularly weigh its profits in favour of Newfoundland. First, it could credit ore that had been extracted from Quebec territory to Newfoundland; second, it could manipulate its adjustments of inventory of ore in the two provinces; and third, it could charge to Quebec an abnormally high proportion of its operating expenses.

In a press release of his own, Iron Ore president W. J. Bennett said that the PQ's charges were "absolutely without foundation." He said taxes to the Quebec and Newfoundland governments were paid according to an accounting formula that had been established when the company began exploiting the iron ore deposits in 1954.

Levesque and Parizeau replied that it was not a question of an accounting formula but rather of how the formula was applied, and specifically of what kind of watch the Quebec government maintained over the application of the formula.

Beyond Human Understanding

By JOHN NICHOL

The world was young and green in September of 1962, when that eminent Canadian accountant, Mr. Kenneth Carter, began his job as chairman of the Royal Commission on tax reform.

Mr. Diefenbaker, the man who appointed Mr. Carter, was prime minister then. Mr. Edgar Benson, the freshman MP from Kingston, had not yet taken his seat in the House for the first time when Mr. Carter embarked on the road that would lead us to the White Paper, innumerable hearings, endless controversy, and our new Tax Act.

But now is the time of the falling leaves. Mr. Carter is dead, Mr. Benson has left politics. And now 10 years and some several hundred millions of words later, the Canadian people are about to test the heady wine of Tax Reform for the first time. It is about to be uncorked, and the word is out that it is a pretty sour brew.

This is a matter of more than passing concern to the Liberal government.

Having taken a hammering at the polls in October, they are now facing the unhappy chore of introducing the Canadian people to their next tax system.

The word is also out that the new income tax forms are complicated beyond the understanding of man, beast, or chartered accountant. Since some nine million Canadians will receive them soon, one can hear a potential nine million screams of rage — enough to penetrate the leaded windows of Parliament and make a grown ward-heeler cry.

The department of revenue seems to be sensitive to the fact that it is in danger of being burned to the ground. Thus they have embarked on a massive public relations program to sell the new tax system. The theme — believe it or not — is It's Easier Than You Think.

This theme is not just the usual advertising flummery. It is not just misleading. It is blood-curdling wrong. The new tax system is far more difficult than you think. More appropriate phrases might be It's Easier If You Drink, or The Land is Strong, but then so is Limburger.

But let's put that aside for the moment. Let me introduce you now to the bravest man in Canada, the Hon. Robert Stanbury, for he is our new revenue minister, and it will be his job to explain these wonders to the Canadian taxpayer. He will need nerves of steel.

As he accepted his new portfolio on Monday last, did he think of Sydney Carton in Charles Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities? Remember Sydney Carton? As he stepped to the guillotine, he turned and said:

"It is a far, far better thing that I do, than I have ever done;
It is a far, far better rest that I go to than I have ever known."

Williams Must Sue CJOR Says Bennett

Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett said Thursday Resources Minister Bob Williams must sue Vancouver radio station CJOR for statements it made concerning Williams' controversial apartment conversion project.

Bennett said CJOR, and program host Pat Burns, were not under the protection of a legislative assembly when remarks about Williams were made. And he said Williams had already stated that unless the radio station apologized on the air for its comments, he would sue.

"He is duty-bound by his own comments to sue," Bennett said.

He added that if Williams had done something which resulted in an embarrassment to the government, Premier Barrett should see to it that Williams does sue CJOR.

"He must do that or he puts himself under a cloud."

Williams has been the subject of recent public attention for his part in the apartment conversion project, in which a set of six apartments were purchased by Williams and partners, renovated extensively, and then sold.

Williams maintains that he made a profit of only $10,000 from the deal but critics have pointed to the government's apparent opposition to schemes of that nature and said that Williams should not have been involved.

On another subject, Bennett said now that Barrett has declared his intention to keep the finance portfolio," he should announce that the NDP government will no longer require school boards to pass capital construction referendums.

The opposition leader said Barrett should follow through with his campaign promises and take the costs of education off property taxes. The NDP government's position has been that it will do this within five years.

"If he is going to be honest and not chicken out on all his policies, he should issue a statement that these school bylaws are not necessary," Bennett said.

He added that the school bylaws require 20-year financing, which goes far beyond the five-year program proposed by the NDP.

Bennett also said the government should be able to offer automobile insurance for less than $25 per year. He held up an NDP campaign advertisement which said that the Social Credit government insured government vehicles for less than $25 a year.

And he said the new government should be able to offer full coverage, with no deductible amount, for under $25 a year.

Muskie Sharing Campaign Losses

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edmund Muskie is trying to pay off a lingering $115,000 campaign debt at 25 cents on the dollar.

Richard A. Kline, former finance chairman for Muskie, said that most of the outstanding bills are owed to printing companies and to hotels. Xerox is the largest single creditor, Kline said.

The formula used by Muskie to settle his campaign debts came to light when Vincent J. Lennon, general manager of the Sauseway Inn South in Tampa, wrote a letter to Muskie complaining about the 25-cent proposal. In the Nov. 28 letter, copies of which were sent to newspapers in Washington and Maine, Lennon said he had received no replies to two letters of his rejecting offer.

The Tampa hotel bill, in Lennon's own description, "is not astronomical." It consists of a $137 bill incurred by Muskie on a campaign trip to Tampa last spring.

Kline, in a telephone interview from Los Angeles, confirmed that letters offering the pay 25 cents for every dollar owed by the Muskie campaign had been sent to all creditors. He added that these letters had inadvertently been sent to creditors under $200, all of which will ultimately be paid in full.

It is a common practice for defeated candidates to settle outstanding bills at a fraction of their cost. Some hotels and printing firms are reluctant to extend credit for this reason.

Kline said that all bills owed to airline and telephone companies and to other government-regulated industries had been paid off. Negotiators are proceeding with other creditors who have not accepted the 25-cent formula.

The Muskie campaign account has only about $8,000 in it against the $115,000 in debts, Kline said. But he said that various Democratic contributors had made commitments that would enable any creditor who accepted the 25-cent formula to be paid.

Law Society Secrecy End Asked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attorney-General Alex Macdonald called Thursday for a new era of openness in the dealings of the legal profession in British Columbia.

He told the annual meeting of the Vancouver Bar Association that it would not be weaker, but stronger, by exposing its inner workings to the public.

Mr. Macdonald, who commended the profession for initiating such programs, as legal aid, said he would like to see the association expand to:

—Open lawyers' disciplinary hearings and law society meetings to the public.

—Include public representation on all governing bodies of the profession.

This, he said, would ensure not only that justice was being done but that it "seemed" it was being done.

He said that any such innovation would have to be undertaken voluntarily by the legal profession itself.

Exhibition Profit

EDMONTON (CP) — The Edmonton Exhibition Association has reported a net profit of $324,047 for 1972 on a record gross revenue of $6,956,795.

Gross revenues increased by 18 per cent over 1971, while net profit was up $43,733 over last year's profit of $280,314.

• A FULL TIME ALDERMAN
I know that as an Alderman devoting my entire time to the affairs of council, backed by my experience as a spectator at council meetings over the past four years and my own political experience, I shall work successfully for you.

• AN INDEPENDENT VOICE
To protect the interests of the community at large. I shall always be available to listen to your needs and to discuss them on council as an Alderman independent of business or commercial interests.

• A MEMBER OF THE VICTORIA ADVISORY PLANNING COMMISSION
I shall stand as a citizen who is concerned about the future of our city. My recent tour of European model cities with Mayor Pollen's party (at my own expense) has inspired me with many new ideas that will protect and benefit every individual who enjoys living in our lovely city.

• SUPPORT FOR THE INTERESTS OF THE OLD AND THE YOUNG
My time and energies will always be available to those who need me most . . . those who are often neglected in the decisions of council. I shall work to protect their interests, to promote more equitable hospital/rest home costs, day care centres, tenants rights. I shall enable the individual's voice to be heard.

City May Bow Out of Fishermen's Wharf

Fed-up with the lack of action or response from Ottawa over the past three years, Victoria is considering washing its hands of the Fishermen's Wharf on Erie Street.

The city has held a lease on the property for several years, passing on 15 per cent of gross revenues to the federal government and using the balance to administer the facility and provide all basic services.

These include paying the salary of a wharfinger, electricity for the boats and float illumination, water, garbage removal and parking.

As the facility has operated at a loss since 1967, and the city has had to absorb the deficit, Victoria informed the Ministry of Transport in 1969 it was not interested in continuing the arrangement — unless the 15 per cent rental was reduced or the berthing fee structure increased.

But this week, in a memorandum to the land development committee, city manager Bill Hooson said nothing has been heard from Ottawa since, with the result that the wharf's gross revenue is "essentially fixed."

Hooson noted that the chances of getting any action on the matter appear slim, and recommended the city inform the MOT that it will end the month-to-month lease arrangement by Dec. 31.

A heavy agenda prevented the item coming up for discussion, but committee chairman Ald. Alf Hood said today it is likely the committee and council will approve Hooson's suggestion.

"I don't want to see that activity displaced, and I don't feel for a moment it will be," Hood said. "But I do think the federal authority should come up with a better agreement that will take this burden off the city taxpayer."

She'd Shatter Peace on Earth

ATLANTA (UPI) — Contending the Christmas message of "peace on earth" is directed only at men, Gloria Steinem indicated Thursday the feminist "revolution" might have to turn to tactics outside the law.

But the editor of Ms. magazine refused to elaborate on such possible new strategy by the feminist movement.

She told a conference of Intercom-South, a group of government agency public relations officers, managers and administrators, only that some feminists might abandon their legal tactics if they prove useless in putting women on an equal basis with men.

She said she never felt the phrase, "peace on earth, good will toward men," applied to her since it singled out men. She said further she couldn't relate to the three wise men and had difficulty accepting a God "who was a member of the ruling class," that is, men.

She said the leaders of the feminist movement aren't interested in mere reform. "It really is a revolution we're dealing with, not a reform."

The goal of the revolution, she said, is a patriarchial system that has dominated the world for 5,000 years and decrees that men take the important roles with women handling the leftovers.

IT'S ONLY A HIGH FOR YULE

ANDOVER, Mass. (UPI) — Since Monday, more than 900 envelopes each containing one marijuana cigarette have arrived at Philips Andover Academy, an exclusive prep school.

"We have some ideas on who did it but we don't know why unless it's some kind of a joke," postal service inspector Robert Hale said Thursday.

"It's a terrible thing," said academy headmaster Theodore Sizer. "It's obscene that somebody had this kind of money to spend on a 'practical joke.'"

The envelopes were addressed to individual students and bore a non-existent return address at Harvard.

Hale said they were taken from student mailboxes after a student employee opened one addressed to him and brought it to authorities.

DAMES & MOORE

Keith E. Robinson

Keith E. Robinson of Vancouver has been appointed manager of the Vancouver office of Dames & Moore, Consulting Engineers, in the Environmental and Applied Earth Sciences.

Mr. Robinson has extensive experience in geotechnical engineering, tailings and earth dam design, and slope stability studies. He was formerly a senior project engineer with Golder-Brawner & Associates, where he was involved in a variety of geotechnical studies for mining projects in Canada, the United States and the Philippines, in addition to local foundation investigations.

With other consulting firms, Mr. Robinson has been involved in all phases of soil and foundation engineering. While with IPEC, he was involved in geotechnical studies for the 500 KV transmission lines and the Bennett Dam.

He completed his undergraduate work in civil engineering at UBC and obtained a Master of Science degree in soil and rock mechanics from the University of Illinois.

Mr. Robinson is a past chairman for the Vancouver Geotechnical Group and a registered engineer in British Columbia.

Dames & Moore is the world's largest consulting engineering firm specializing in the environmental and applied earth sciences. The firm has 31 offices worldwide, including Vancouver, Toronto and Calgary.

Record Pipe Order

HAMILTON (CP) — Trans-Canada Pipe lines has ordered a record $70,250,000 of steel pipe from the Steel Co. of Canada.

Trans-Canada chairman James Kerr said the pipe will be used to construct 665 miles of lines in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and northern Ontario.

A Stelco official said it is the largest order ever received by the Canadian steel industry.

He said the order for next year would not create new jobs at the plant, but ensure stabilized employment.

Trans-Canada bought $57,500,000 of pipe from Stelco earlier this year.

Steel plate for the pipe will be produced in Hamilton, most of the pipe will be manufactured in Stelco's Welland plant, and a smaller amount made in the firm's plant in Camrose, Alta.

SPECIAL ORDER FOR JAPANESE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first export of British Columbia lumber cut to Japanese construction dimensions will begin in February.

It will be the start of a 12-month, $2 million contract between Greenwood Forest Products (1969) Ltd. of Penticton and Misawa Homes Co. Ltd. of Tokyo which Greenwood administrator A. B. Reilly hopes will free his firm from the vagaries of the lumber market.

Reilly said that if Misawa's Tokyo operation continues to grow as expected, Greenwood could be shipping to Japan more than 75 million board feet of lumber a year by 1975.

The current contract involves a total of 12 million board feet of spruce and lodge pole pine.

Misawa, one of the largest prefabricated home manufacturers in Japan, built 14,000 units this year and forecasts 20,000 in 1973.

The lumber will be used by Misawa to make honeycomb cores for about 55 sizes of prefabricated panels. Panel surfaces are plywood which is glued to the core under pressure. Misawa makes prefabricated homes by using combinations of different-sized panels.

Earlier this year the two companies set up Misawa Greenwood Homes Ltd. in Manitoba which expects to manufacture 600 prefabricated homes to Canadian standards this year.

Greenwood, whose annual sales have been in the $3 million range, will begin gearing up for the new lumber sizes next week and expects to begin stockpiling in Vancouver in January in preparation for the first shipment in February.

Corval Gets East Option

Corval Resources Ltd. has acquired an option to purchase a group of mining claims in Noranda, Quebec, from Pioneer Consultants Ltd. and Kemins Explorations Ltd. for $5,000 and 100,000 treasury shares, of which 50,000 shares are issued immediately and the remainder will be issued in 90 days subject to engineering reports.

Commercial Oil and Gas Ltd. has acquired an interest in several properties from Kingside Minerals and Investments Ltd. for 45,000 treasury shares. The company has an option on the remaining Kingside interest in the properties for $45,000 cash.

Jones, Gable and Co. Ltd. has undertaken to sell 250,000 treasury shares of Canwex Explorations Ltd. at a minimum price of 75 cents per share.

Canarim Investment Corporation has failed to exercise its option to buy 100,000 shares of Andex Mines at 25 cents per share. The agreement is cancelled.

Air Canada 'A Monster Squeezing Competition'

OTTAWA (CP) — A CP Air vice-president pictured Thursday a monster squeezing the competition if Air Canada is allowed to buy a one-third interest in Wardair Canada Ltd.

But lawyers for Air Canada saw the purchase as a legitimate attempt by the Crown corporation to protect its competitive position and carve a larger slice of the world air charter market for Canada.

The opposing views were outlined before the Canadian Transport Commission which is hearing objections to the Wardair acquisition. Air Canada must receive commission approval before completing the purchase.

The hearing will resume Monday.

H. B. Renwick, a CP Air vice-president, said the combination of Air Canada, largest Canadian scheduled airline, and Wardair, largest air charter carrier in Canada would restrict competition in the charter market.

He said it would be a "further encroachment by the government in the private sector." He was referring to Air Canada as a government airline.

He said the carriers drew 55 per cent of the charter passengers travelling between Canada and foreign centres in 1971.

LEAD COMPETITORS

Wardair and Air Canada were far ahead of their Canadian competitors, together carrying 62.9 per cent of the Canadian share of the traffic, he said. Wardair led all Canadian charter carriers with 33.5 per cent of the passengers.

Together the two companies would be even tougher, he said.

The general experience in industry was that the giants gradually increased their share of the market at the expense of their smaller rivals.

J. M. Robins, director of management services for Pacific Western Airlines, said his company fears Air Canada may gain a foothold in the Northwest Territories market through Wardair.

The Northwest Territories is not part of the territory designated to Air Canada under the national air policy dividing up domestic routes among the scheduled airlines.

Wardair has a base at Yellowknife and is seeking others in the Northwest Territories, Robins said. Pacific Western operates to the N.W.T and the Western Arctic as well as other portions of Western Canada.

Gordon Henderson, representing Air Canada, said that any responsible company would try to protect itself as there appeared to be widespread changes in the market. It would also try to protect the public interest.

Canada's Viet Terms 'Meetable'

Times News Services

BRUSSELS — U.S. State Secretary William Rogers said today he believes most of the conditions Canada has set for participation in a proposed observer team in Vietnam can be met.

"I think the position Canada has taken is perfectly reasonable," Rogers said in the first clear indication Canadian terms would be acceptable if a ceasefire can be negotiated at the Paris peace talks.

Meanwhile in Paris, U.S. negotiator Henry Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho met today for the fifth time this week in further secret talks.

Earlier Viet Cong delegate Nguyen Thi Binh dashed speculation that a ceasefire agreement would be signed this week. One Paris newspaper forecast Thursday that it would be signed within 48 hours.

Kissinger also met today with French President Georges Pompidou presumably to brief him on details of the negotiations. The meeting was not announced in advance and even presidential aides could not immediately give a reason for it.

While negotiations continued in Paris, U.S. B-52 bombers continued saturation bombing of North Vietnamese supply routes across the demilitarized zone today, dropping another 7,000 tons of bombs in 18 hours.

Ground fighting was reported in Quang Tri province where South Vietnamese marines and paratroopers are trying to retake territory captured by the North Vietnamese in their offensive last spring.

Advance Voting 'Light'

Light turnout in advance polls for Saturday's civic elections is usual, and no indication of increased apathy, municipal clerks in the capital region said today.

"If it were a mayoralty contest it might be different," Victoria city clerk Morran Waller said, "but this turnout is no different from other off-years. It doesn't necessarily reflect what will be the turnout tomorrow."

In Victoria, 28 people had turned out for the advance poll by 10 this morning. The poll closes at 5 p.m. today.

Last year, when a new mayor was elected, 113 advance ballots were cast. In the 1970 off-year election 45 people voted in advance.

Saanich municipal clerk reported 13 advance ballots cast by late this morning, saying it was about average for the first day and a half of the two-day advance poll.

In Oak Bay 13 turned out Thursday for the first day of advanced polling and three more voted this morning.

North Saanich reported 10 early voters Thursday and two more early this morning. The municipal clerk said usually seven or eight advance ballots are cast.

Five advance ballots were cast in a three-hour poll Thursday in Central Saanich. Another advance poll will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. today.

In a one-day advance poll Wednesday in Sidney, nine ballots were cast.

Regular voting in all seven municipalities begins at 8 a.m. Saturday with polls closing at 8 p.m.

House Starts Hit 193,322

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction started on 18,934 new houses and apartments in urban communities during November, bringing the year's total to 193,322, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. reported.

The federal housing agency said November house-building activity represented an annual rate of 225,400, down from the previous month's 264,000.

However, the year's total was still expected to reach 255,000, well ahead of the 245,000 goal set by the Economic Council of Canada for the next three years.

MDA Trafficker Remanded

A 29-year-old man pleaded guilty in provincial court Thursday to charges of trafficking in MDA and possession of the drug for the purpose of trafficking.

Wayne Flegg of 18-777 Fort Street, according to prosecutor Mike Hutchinson, was arrested earlier Thursday when a Victoria police constable stopped him on Johnson. Flegg dropped a bag containing 23 capsules which he later admitted was MDA.

Flegg was on remand on a trafficking charge to which he had originally pleaded not guilty. The charge arose when Flegg sold RCMP undercover agent Blane Froats 25 capsules of MDA in the Churchill Hotel Aug. 10 for $50.

Asked by Judge William Ostler if he wished to apply for legal aid, Flegg replied: "No, sir. I don't think I really need it." He was remanded to Dec. 22 for sentence.

New High School To Be Built

A 23-classroom school in the McDonald Park area of the Saanich Peninsula School District will be contracted soon, Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced Thursday.

The $1,589,300 school, Parkland Secondary, is one of several contracts worth $4,025,000 approved across the province.

Mercedes-Benz announces the 280 sedan.
More motor—not more chrome

Look closely: the Mercedes-Benz 250 sedan has evolved into the Mercedes-Benz 280. Without one jot of styling trickery.

Instead of a model change, a model improvement. Purring under the hood, a new 2.8 litre engine with twin overhead camshafts, hemi-head, 2-stage compound carburetors. "Turbine-like smoothness" was the verdict of a respected British writer.

The engineers at Mercedes-Benz have also fitted the 280 with even bigger front-wheel discs for awesome stopping power; front and rear anti-sway bars; big sticky radial tires.

Result? A car that's more a precision instrument: the smooth power and luxury you expect of an expensive sedan combined with the sure-footed speed you expect of a great European road machine.

Part-Time Jobs for Pupils Urged

Another small audience greeted school board candidates Thursday night when they met in public debate for the third and last time before Saturday's election.

About 20 people listened to nine of the 10 candidates for trustee discuss their proposals for the future of the Greater Victoria school district.

Mimi Robertson said students are getting bored with school and listed several proposals to make curriculums more exciting.

She said programs for occupational students should be expanded to include on-the-job training. If students were allowed to work half the time, she said, they would not be bored, they would earn extra money and they still obtain a high school diploma.

John Duffus said he was also in favor of broadening curriculums especially in junior high schools where he said there is too much repetition.

He added that teachers should be paid fairly but not receive parity with Vancouver, for example, since each school district should be dealt with separately.

Ted Robbins said he is concerned about the school board budget and wanted to make sure that in any year it did not go beyond 110 per cent of the previous year's budget.

He feared that too many educators were gaining control of school boards and wanted to take advantage of public monies without being subject to criticism.

Joseph Richards agreed that there would be cause for concern if too many people from the educational field were elected to the school board, noting that the board can approve increases in operating expenses over 110 per cent if two-thirds of the board agrees.

Richards said the ward system would also give fairer representation on the board.

Incumbent Lavinia Greenwood disagreed with the idea of ward voting, saying elections at large are healthier for schools.

She supported more modern methods of classroom management and felt the grading system should be abolished in elementary schools in favor of continuous progress for each student.

William Ross told the audience he supported the government's stand on funding education through provincial revenue rather than through local school boards.

He added that he favored rules, regulations and routines in a school and use of strict discipline to deal with unco-operative students.

Incumbent Philip Ney said he supported the idea of each school developing its own philosophy and allowing parents to choose the kind of education they wished their child to have.

He said he did not support permanent tenure for teachers but would like to see teachers have the opportunity to return to upgrade themselves.

Walter Donald, also an incumbent, favored lower student-teacher ratio especially in elementary schools.

He added that he would support greater communication between trustees, parents and teachers, probably in the form of ad hoc committees to discuss needs in the school district.

Robert Zeitz said he was against the ward system and was also concerned about school board finances.

He said he would like to see more information given to the public on how education money is spent.

United Fishermen To Rejoin CLC

The Canadian Labor Congress decided Thursday to grant affiliation to two unions expelled from earlier congresses during "red scare" times.

They are the 7,000-member United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the 24,000-member United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America.

The decisions were welcomed today by UFAWU secretary-treasurer Jack Nichol and Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan.

"It has been a long time in coming," said Nichol.

But he added that the union is "somewhat disappointed" the CLC has confined the UFAWV's jurisdiction to British Columbia. He had hoped it would be extended to the Great Lakes.

The CLC granted the UFAWU affiliation as a regional union to avoid conflict with the Canadian Food and Allied Workers. Both unions in recent years have been organizing fishery workers on the east coast.

Nichol said the decision means that UFAWU organizing on the east coast will come to an end "at least for the moment."

Ryan said readmission of the fishermen "should go over very well in B.C. because it's a matter that has agitated the B.C. Federation of Labor for many years. This has, in effect, taken off the agenda one of the divisive issues that created agitation within the congress itself."

The UFAWU was expelled from the old Trades and Labor Congress of Canada in 1953.

Nichol said the reason was a technicality—criticism in the union's paper of raiding tactics on the Vancouver Civic Outside Workers Union.

"The underlying reason was the general purge of unions led by Communists or suspected Communists," he said.

The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, with most of its members in Ontario, was expelled from the old Canadian Congress of Labor in 1949 at the height of the "red scare" days.

A rival union, the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, was established but in Canada it has managed to organize only 12,000 members.

Man. Autopac Has Surplus, Rates to Drop

WINNIPEG (CP) — Most Manitoba motorists will pay slightly less in premiums for public auto insurance next year as Autopac, the Manitoba government automobile insurance atency, establishes a new system of ratings groups to allow for the depreciation of older cars.

While owners of new 1973 cars will pay slightly more than owners of new 1972 cars did last year, owners of older cars will pay less than they did last year as a result of the new rate schedule.

The difference in most cases will mean a reduction of from $1 to $4 on a yearly premium, in addition to the elimination of the $2 unsatisfied judgment fund fee from the vehicle licence plate charge.

Municipal affairs minister Howard Pawley, chairman of the crown corporation, said Autopac has a $2.3 million surplus at the end of the first year of its operations, and that $2 million of this money will be set aside in a rate stabilization fund to help absorb future cost increases.

Pawley also announced that:

—Starting Jan. 1, motorists who have Autopac extension policies ($50 or $100 deductible) will receive, without further payment, $25 deductible coverage on their cars' windshields.

—Starting March 1, there will be a minimum $25 deductible on all comprehensive claims. The provision for no decuctible in the case of damage by vandalism or theft of part of the automobile will be eliminated.

Pawley said the new rating group schedule for private passenger cars was calculated after considering all the factors that affect premiums.

For example, it was found that motorists who bought extension policies had a better claims record than those who did not.

However, the chief factor in pushing premiums down was the decrease in a car's value from year to year, and thus a decrease in the maximum insurance claim for vehicle damage, he said.

Upward pressures on costs include general increases in salaries, the cost of parts and the $1.1 million annual increase in payments for body shops and tow truck operators. These pressures, said Pawley, will continue to influence small claims which are unaffected by the depreciation in a vehicle's total value.

Pawley said about $1.1 million of Autopac's $2.3 million surplus came from investment income, which previously was not considered by private insurance companies when setting their premium schedules.

B.C. Towboat Negotiations Break Down

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations between the Towboat Industrial Relations Association and two unions representing 650 unlicensed British Columbia towboat workers broke down Thursday and union spokesman Tom McGrath said application would be made for a federal conciliation board to enter the dispute.

The talks between Tira and the Seafarers International Union of Canada and Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers started July 12.

McGrath said negotiations broke down over wages, pensions and length of contract. He held out little hope that a conciliation board would be able to resolve the dispute, adding "it is a waste of the taxpayers' money."

Ecologists Oppose Dam

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The state department of ecology has reviewed its position on the proposed high Ross Dam and is still against it, says Director John Biggs.

Seattle City Light has proposed raising the dam by 122½ feet, which the department said would flood 5,200 acres in the upper Skagit River Valley in southern British Columbia.

"The department has continually monitored the situation for several months and has concluded that any benefits derived from the high Ross Dam would be so short-lived that the environmental damage the raising of the dam would cause would materially outweigh any advantages," Biggs said.

WHY JOE BOURQUE FOR ALDERMAN IN SAANICH?

HERE'S WHY!

I am not a one or two issue person. Nor, I suspect are many of the thousands of Saanich residents.

- SPENDING PRIORITIES We should have highest priority for services for people: roads, sidewalks, street lighting and other "value items", recreational or community centres. The basics must come first.
- URBAN AND SUBURBAN PLANNING Some current spot zoning is not from an overall plan and I am opposed to that type of programme.
- ECOLOGY AND OUR ENVIRONMENT We must do more than pay lip service to re-cycling. We should provide collection centres throughout the municipality and adequate information for householders on how they can participate in re-cycling.
- MAXIMIZATION OF THE TAX DOLLAR Getting the best use of our tax dollar is of great importance to me. I have been working in banking, commercial financing and economic administration since 1953. My education and postgraduate training is in commercial bank credit financial statement analysis, corporate law, communication and skills of management, advanced accounting and tax planning.
- EFFICIENCY IN MUNICIPAL OPERATION The Kates, Peat, Marwick & Co. report, which is an efficiency study of the municipality, requires close scrutiny and better utilization of the recommended changes to improve procedural efficiency at the staff level.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 23-year-old man was fined $250 by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Thursday for the theft of a socket set from a local department store.

Roger Charles Hlina was arrested Dec. 6 at Simpson Sears, with $51 in his possession. Value of the stolen socket set was $12.91.

A man was given a suspended sentence and placed on two years' probation for stealing a purse from a parked truck on Niagara St., Nov. 26.

Michael James Pickford, 19, of no fixed address, was told by Crown prosecutor John Macintyre that the young man "would get yet another chance" to rehabilitate himself. A special volunteer probation officer had been found for Pickford, with the accused as his sole responsibility.

"I want to give you an opportunity . . . because the probation officer has gone to such trouble for you," Ostler told the accused.

A 17-year-old woman was given a suspended sentence and put on six months' probation on a two-count of theft under $200.

Mona Pedersen, 17, of 1230 Lockley, pled guilty to two Nov. 4 offences, in Kresge's and Woolworth's on Douglas, involving merchandise of a total value of $2.48.

Melvin Douglas Roy, 25, of 71-Windsor Motel, was sent to prison for three months, to be followed by a one-year period of probation, on a charge of indecent exposure.

The Nov. 13 incident involved a female hitchhiker, picked up by Roy.

Edward Nolan, 48, of no fixed address, was sentenced to 30 days in prison for causing a disturbance while being drunk Dec. 6 in Centennial Square.

In traffic court, Kenneth Philip Charlie, 23, of Duncan was fined $350 for impaired driving by Judge Harold Alder.

OAK BAY
JOHN EAMER-GOULT
for Alderman

In the 1950's it was often argued that extensive apartment construction would broaden the tax base and thus lower property taxes for home owners. When first seeking election two years ago, I disputed this claim and urged a professional study of this question. Mr. Frederich Zech was accordingly commissioned to prepare a study of this matter. His exhaustive report demonstrated that the tax benefits to the home owner of extensive apartment construction were negligible. To be specific, if 145 acres of central Oak Bay were covered with apartments, the net saving to the average taxpayer would be $6.30. This miniscule saving must be weighed against the influx of automobiles and congestion resulting from this apartment expansion and drastically changing the character of Oak Bay. Therefore, my pledge is to continue, if re-elected to council, to fight to retain Oak Bay as bascilally an area of single family dwellings.

People on a Road Back —But It's Not Enough

Item: To the Gorge Road rehabilitation hospital this afternoon for another session with my comely therapist who is determined that I'll walk properly again if she has to kill me in the process.

It's like no other hospital I've ever visited. Since everybody, even the very ancient patient, is theoretically on the road back from some low point in his life there's a contagious spirit of determination and sometimes heroic effort. The scene in the therapy room with everyone working like billy-be-damned is inspiring. The whole place and all of the staff I've met radiate an atmosphere of resolute recovery that's almost never found in other hospitals.

Yet at "The Gorge", too, there's a sad overcrowding, so much so that the physiotherapy gals have had to open their coffee retreat to patients. There's a long waiting list just as there'll be when the adjoining new 300-bed extended care hospital is opened at the end of January.

I hobbled out, as I always do, profoundly grateful to people with a sense of mission, profoundly ashamed of a country that fails to meet the needs of everyone.

Item: A morning to ponder the question: How far are the banks going to go in tarting up their once austere image?

That column of some weeks ago about Mary of the Royal Bank has found its way to the inner sanctum of the Royal's main office in St. Catherine's Street, Montreal, and the result is a hearty letter from the manager himself, John Clarke, who began his career here at the Royal's Fort Street branch more than 25 years ago when banks, by God, were banks and not yet in show business.

John writes to tell me about the main branch's Royal Oktoberfest, a three-day revelry fashioned after the famous Munich beer festival. Mary was there in the flesh to hand out roses to the first 400 ladies. You could have a Polaroid picture taken with her if that's what you wanted. The Old Munich Band, a six-piece combo with an oom-pah sound, went oom-pah as the guests had apple strudel with root beer and gave the old Munich toast "Ein Prosit Der Gemuetlichkeit!" ("How's your sister!") A drawing was made for a Lufthansa trip to the real thing in Munich where the beer is Lowenbrau and not the A and W kind.

"Unusual for a bank?" asks John Clarke rhetorically. "Yes, but after all the attitude of banks and bankers has, along with other business, changed and we want to show that we are human, too, and, like our customers and friends, enjoy a little fun now and then."

Kind of makes you wonder how far they'll go. Will they ever give money away, like apple strudel? Who can tell?

Item: The newest edition of the Humanist in Canada magazine on my desk this morning, it being almost entirely devoted to the writing and the life of the greatest of all humanists, Bertrand Russell, and I found it a moving experience.

Not the least interesting thing about Lord Russell was his love affair with his second wife and there is an exchange of their sentiments that is most memorable.

"Bertie" had written these lines to Lady Edith:

Through the long years
I sought peace.
I found ecstasy, I found anguish,
I found madness,
I found loneliness.
I found the solitary pain that gnaws the heart.
But peace I did not find.

Now, old and near my end,
I have known you,
And, knowing you,
I have found both ecstasy and peace.
I know rest.
After so many lonely years,
I know what life and love may be.
Now, if I sleep,
I shall sleep fulfilled.

And Edith, asked by a television interviewer to describe what Lord Russell was really like, summed it all up in two sentences:

"He was passionate, gentle, considerate, generous, and faithfully good natured, endlessly good fun. He was an exceptionally great man, a noble human being, utterly delightful and very dear."

Such fine sentiment reminded me of the last will of Sean O'Casey and I brought down from its shelf Eileen O'Casey's book, "Sean," published last year by MacMillans. The will that Sean wrote in September, 1962, reads this way:

"I bequeath and leave to my beloved wife, Eileen O'Casey, all I have and hope to get: all royalties due, all contracts, all manuscripts and typescripts, all royalties to come, fees of every sort — in short, all I am possessed of, and all moneys my work may earn in future years. I give all my goods, estate valuation and all else, to her in gratitude for many, many years of happy and fruitful companionship; and with all I bequeath to her my deep love, as deep now, deeper, indeed, than, the love I felt for her in earlier years."

Item: Two items across my desk today that set me to thinking about the arbitrary way that we judge news.

One: a routine notice that Saturday, Dec. 9, will be another of the once-monthly "newspaper days" at the Recycling Depot at 4026 Borden Street (next to the car-testing station) and that the station will be accepting old newspapers from nine-to-five. Last month's newspaper day total was a whopping 40 tons and someone out there has figured it out that that's the equivalent of 680 trees.

Two: A report by the Greater Victoria Citizens' Counselling Centre and it surprised me to read about its phenomenal growth. Marriage counselling sessions have tripled in a year, now run to more than 125 sessions each month. The numbers of people taking part in groups and workshops has increased six times over. Phone calls at the centre, itself, are running at more than 3,000 a year with 27 counsellors ready to give their help and another 20 in training.

These are great stories of quiet, day-to-day dedication by good citizens who are more interested in service than in recognition, but not "news", as we judge it and that's a pity.

'Electric Personality Finally Caught Fire'

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

What do you do when you've lost everything you own — including a valuable collection of antiques and paintings that can never be replaced?

You crack jokes if you're born with humor and tenacity.

Miss Alyx Toppin looked at her fire-gutted cottage overlooking Haro Strait at 2944 Phyllis this morning, straightened her back, and quipped:

"My electric personality finally caught fire!"

Underneath the front, however, it was obvious the charred remains of a lifetime collection of valuable antiques and paintings was hard to take.

When neighbors phoned her at the store she operates, the Antique Shop, 1032 Fort, at 5:45 p.m. Thursday she left immediately. By the time she and the Saanich fire department arrived the 60-year-old home was destroyed.

Miss Toppin comes from a wealthy Ulster family and had followed the interests of her father, an ex-museum director and author of many books on ceramics and pottery.

She said:

"People keep asking me how I can be calm at a time like this. I tell them that when you've lived through the Irish civil war and come through the air raids and bombings of the Second World War you learn to take everything in your stride."

"How am I going to make out my income tax with no desk?"

She searched the home, stepping gingerly over the debris. She said that although she had insurance, it couldn't in any way cover the valuables she's lost.

"Over in that corner is a priceless marble head buried beneath the debris," she said.

She searched in vain for a valuable 18th century painting, insured for $10,000.

Miss Toppin mused on the cause of the fire:

"It could be anything. I'd been using a lot more heat to keep warm and the furnace is an old one."

$100,000 Wince

Victoria has spent more than $72,000 on building new change room and toilet facilities at Thetis Lake Park this year, plus another $20,000 on maintenance.

The figure of nearly $100,000, reported to Thursday's finance committee meeting, made some aldermen wince. Ald. Harold Olafson complained that spending so much on a regional facility was "just ridiculous."

Agreeing, Mayor Peter Pollen said: "The sooner we face the facts of life and recognize that this is a regional park, and get it into the regional park system, the better."

Cold, Colder Coldest!

It's colder in Victoria than in the Arctic.

While polar bears slept in relatively warm 30-degree temperatures overnight, Victorians shivered as the mercury hit a record low of 11 degrees.

Weathermen say the massive cold front which has brought freezing temperatures to Victoria for several days, is now causing sub-zero temperatures in Oregon and leaving the Arctic relatively warm.

Victoria's low overnight was 14 degrees lower than the old record of 25 set on Dec. 8, 1944.

Warmer air is headed for the capital region, weathermen say, and will bring increasing clouds and the possibility of snow overnight.

Clouds should clear by noon Saturday, however, with colder temperatures returning in the afternoon.

In Vancouver it was a record 12 degrees, the coldest Dec. 8 since 1949 when the temperature dropped to 21. Other records were set in Nanaimo, where it was 6 degrees; Abbotsford, where it was 14, and Tofino, which recorded 12 degrees. It was a record 24 below in Cranbrook, 13 below in Williams Lake and 3 below in Penticton.

Major Revamping Facing Hospital Administration

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Capital Regional Hospital Board next week will consider revamping its administration to get co-ordinated hospital development in Greater Victoria rolling.

Among proposals to go before the board Wednesday will be:

—hiring a well-qualified director or co-ordinator to pull the regional board's hospital work together, initiate and guide the planning and provide a link between the board, its advisers, doctors in the community, hospitals and the provincial government.

—spelling out the function of the board's six-man advisory committee, a group of doctors and hospital administrators charged with advising the board on technical matters. It is generally agreed the committee has been working hard but not effectively.

—expanding the advisory committee from six to seven which would more broadly represent hospital administration, the medical profession, nursing or other para-medical support staff, social services and the urban and rural community.

The recommendations were prepared by Dennis Young, the regional board's executive director, at the request of Art Young, chairman of the regional hospital board, and were considered at an executive meeting Thursday.

With minor modifications they will be recommended to the full regional hospital board when it next meets on Wednesday.

'Developed in Isolation'

On the question of a regional hospital co-ordinator, Young's report says:

"When considering the importance of someone to fill this role and the qualifications that should be brought to the job, sight must not be lost of the fact that the Capital Region is the second most densely populated area in British Columbia.

"For a number of years inadequate attention has been given to the quality of the physical plant for the provision of acute hospital care, and what improvements have been effected for individual hospitals have largely been developed in isolation from the over-all needs of the total community."

Young said a review of salaries being paid persons with the needed qualifications suggested a salary of $22,000 to $23,000 was in order.

"I realize that this is a high salary and the proposal may be difficult for board members to accept, but I would point out that his job would be to guide the expenditure of a capital program . . . of up to $24 million over the next five years and will have a great influence on hospital operating costs totalling many millions of dollars annually."

Of the advisory committee, he said:

"It seems to me that the committee has not been presented with a clearly identifiable role nor with adequate resources to follow up the many ideas initiated by its members.

"In addition, it is my opinion that the committee is too narrowly based and that the resources of the community have not been fully utilized in developing a group of persons with a broad cross-section of interests, capable of determining meaningful recommendations for the improvement of hospital facilities."

The vagueness of the advisory committee's function "had undoubtedly been a contributor to the lack of firm recommendations in many areas," said Young, in proposing five specific functions it should fulfil.

These include assisting in development of the regional board's policy for delivering health care, recommending changes to regulations and legislation to enable such policy to be effective, recommending meaningful and effective programs of health or hospital care, reporting on special needs such as ambulance services.

In other business the executive committee of the regional hospital board Thursday approved having the chairman meet with Health Minister Dennis Cocke and federal officials to try and settle the future of Veterans Hospital.

$19,439 Cafeteria Renovation

A contract for $19,439, of renovation work to government employees' cafeteria facilities has been let by the department of public works to Cana Construction Ltd. of Victoria.

Public Works Minister Bill Harley announced the award today. The work is to be done on the government cafeteria on Michigan Street. The government recently completed work on a cafeteria in the Douglas Building.

Further work on the Douglas Building cafeteria was covered in a recent contract awarded to David's Plumbing and Heating, 4251 Torquay Drive. The contract is for $8,933 for ducting and steam piping work.

Truck Hits Pole

A 38-year-old man received internal injuries after colliding with a utility pole on Esquimalt Road at 9 a.m. today Victoria police said.

Stanley Schwartz, 38, of 2753 Strathmore, was driving west on Esquimalt in a 1963 Ford pickup truck when he crashed into the pole 225 feet west of Harbour Road, police said.

Mount St. Mary Renovation Reconsidered

A plan to renovate Mount St. Mary Hospital for close to $500,000 is being examined further by the provincial government and may lead to 75 more beds being added.

But the second look may also lead to "a very conservative" modernization program instead.

The hospital at 999 Burdett has been operated by the Sisters of St. Ann for 31 years and has about 130 patients who are chronically ill and mostly elderly.

The Capital Regional Hospital Board last April approved the modernization program after a study was undertaken by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, the provincial agency administering hospitals.

The updating would have added only three new beds, with most of the money going to improve nursing facilities, patient care areas and such sections as the dietary department.

While the program was approved by the regional directors, it still requires approval of the provincial government and a letter received by the regional hospital board executive at its meeting Thursday indicates the BCHIS wants to give more study to the matter.

The letter is from assistant deputy minister Jim Mainguy to T. S. Shorthouse, chairman of the Mount St. Mary Hospital board and in it he notes the BCHIS study indicated cost of the renovation program was estimated at about $466,000.

After the study BCHIS looked further into advantages and disadvantages of spending that much money to improve the hospital without expanding accommodation, the letter says.

"While the improvements outlined were estimated to allow for savings in operating cost, further work was felt to be necessary to see the extent to which the operating savings might offset the additional capital cost.

"The team which did the original study has been looking into these factors to see the implications of trying to add, say, 75 beds to Mount St. Mary in the interests of further operating economies, further improvement in service, and the location of additional extended care beds in the downtown area," Mainguy wrote.

"Information from the study should make it possible to examine more precisely the cost benefits of developing beds at Mount St. Mary or at other locations."

"If, as a result of this, the construction of additional beds on other sites is favored, then there may be reason to concentrate the capital funds at other locations and adopt a very conservative renovation program for Mount St. Mary."

Mainguy estimated the additional study will be completed within the next two months.

ICE STILL TOO WEAK FOR SKATING—POLICE

This week's cold temperatures have frozen most Greater Victoria lakes and ponds but local police and RCMP warn people not to walk or skate on them.

Saanich police said youngsters walking on the edges of Beaver Lake Thursday night were asked to leave because the ice is "far too thin" and there are open patches in the middle.

Elk Lake has not begun to freeze and Panama Flats, near Carey and Interurban, is dry. The creek running down the middle of the flats is unsafe, police said.

Colwood RCMP asked people skating on Portage Inlet Thursday to leave, and Langford, Colwood and Glen Lakes are frozen "just on the edges."

A Victoria parks department spokesman said the ponds in Beacon Hill Park are "not good enough to support any numbers."

"We make tests before we allow them on the ice," said the spokesman.

Sidney RCMP said Durrance Lake has not frozen and other ponds within their jurisdiction are unsafe.

'Other Three' Hurt Most

Victoria Cougars "had nothing to be ashamed of for 57" but it was the other three minutes that hurt the Cats in Thursday's 8-5 Western Canada Junior Hockey League game at Medicine Hat.

That's how coach Mitch Pechet viewed it after the Tigers struck for three goals within three minutes to turn the game around and pull out a victory for 2,731 hometown fans.

Ahead 4-1 after the first period and still in command, 5-3, at the half-way point of the game, the Cougars were obviously stung by Medicine Hat's three-goal outburst late in the second period.

Don Dziadyk, Carl Cureatuz, Brad Richardson, Dale Cook and Ed Boucha scored for Cougars, playing their third game in as many nights.

It was a mild meeting with only four minor penalties called, two to each team. Dean scored the first of his two goals while Cook was serving one of Victoria's minors, and it was a goal that helped touch off Medicine Hat's second-period outburst.

Tigers counted five of their goals in the second period while out-shooting Cougars 26-12.

Cougars wrap up a three-game Alberta visit by playing the Oil Kings in Edmonton tonight, then return home to face Flin Flon Bombers Sunday in Memorial Arena.

Tigers pulled into a second-place tie with Edmonton Oil Kings as a result of the victory. Oil Kings were knocked out of first place by Brandon Wheat Kings, who scored an 8-5 decision in Edmonton while New Westminster Bruins tripped Flin Flon 6-2.

Referee Darryl Havrelock was pelted with programs and rubber boots with less than three minutes to play when Edmonton fans thought he missed an obvious Brandon penalty.

Edmonton coach Brian Shaw went on the ice, but was restrained by several of his players before reaching Havrelock. Shaw drew a bench minor and game misconduct.

Hot Bruins Burn Blues; Tie Rangers

By The Canadian Press

It didn't have the finesse one might find on the ballroom floor of a swank hotel, but the pairings on Boston Garden ice Thursday night were a delight to 15,003 fans.

After a slow start, the defending Stanley Cup champion Bruins have climbed into contention in the National Hockey League East Division. It was their 10th straight game without a loss.

St. Louis Blues were their latest victims, falling 5-0 as Mike Walton continued his latest scoring streak and veteran goaltender Eddie Johnston mastered St. Louis shooters for the second straight game.

The victory edged Boston into a second-place tie with New York Rangers, each with 35 points, four behind division-leading Montreal Canadiens.

In other games, it was Philadelphia Flyers 6, Minnesota North Stars 2; Buffalo Sabres 6, Detroit Red Wings 1; Atlanta Flames 5, Vancouver Canucks 2.

The Bruins, hit hard by losses to the rival World Hockey Association at the start of the season, had little trouble filling the vacancies.

Walton scored two goals against the Blues—his 12th in the last 12 games—and Johnston disciplined St. Louis sticks in turning aside 25 shots. He blanked them 4-0 in their last meeting, Nov. 16.

After a quiet first period, it developed into a typical St. Louis-Boston game after Bruins' Ken Hodge and rookie goaltender Bob Johnson exchanged punches midway into the second period.

Barclay Plager of St. Louis and Phil Esposito were also thumbed for fighting in the final minute of the period, paving the way for two third-period scraps between Boston newcomer Terry O'Reilly and Blues' Floyd Thompson.

The win gave the first-year Flames an 11-13-5 mark for the season.

Scallen Scoffs at Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thomas Scallen, president of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, said Thursday the club is not controlled by any outside interests and is not for sale.

Scallen, in Minneapolis, said in a telephone interview that a report by Toronto newspaper columnist Dick Beddoes that Chicago Black Hawks of the NHL had acquired control of the Canucks was not true.

Beddoes had said the Black Hawks acquired a controlling interest in the Canucks either through ownership of shares in the team or in collateral to pay off a $4-million bank loan to the Bank of British Columbia.

However, Coley Hall, a director of both the Canucks and the bank said the bank had given the team a one-year extension to pay off the loan.

Scallen said Black Hawks owner Arthur M. Wirtz "is one of my closest and dearest friends."

"We borrow money from Wirtz from time to time and we always pay it back.

"We have just concluded refinancing and the club is not for sale."

Mr. Hall said that since the bank had "just renewed the loan this week, I don't think there's anything to that story."

The Canucks are controlled through Medical Investment Corp. of Minneapolis Medicor, which has a 60 per cent share holding in Northwest Sports Enterprises, parent company of the Canucks.

Two weeks ago, Thomas Scallen, president of Medicor and the Canucks, announced that he had privately purchased 100,000 shares in Northwest Sports and first-refusal rights to any other shares offered for sale from the Capozzi family of Kelowna, B.C.

Scallen declined then to say whether his purchase was financed by the NHL, but Hall said the purchase was made through a $1.5 million loan from the Toronto Dominion Bank, which was guaranteed by the NHL.

Hall said the report that the Canucks were controlled by the Black Hawks may have started because Arthur M. Wirtz, owner of the Chicago club, had helped Medicor with its ice show, Holiday on Ice.

The report was just the latest in the tangled financial dealings of the Canucks, which have been prominent on financial pages since Medicor acquired controlling interest in the team before its entrance into the NHL in 1970.

First, money was transferred from Northwest Sports to Medicor to liquidate the Minneapolis company's debts in the United States. Then the Capozzi family lent $4 million to the Canucks in July of 1971 to cover the transferred money.

Then, the Bank of B.C. loan was obtained to pay off the Capozzis.

The Canucks' financial structure isn't threatened. It earns about $2 million annually including $750,000 from television revenue.

CHARLIE HODGE QUITS NATS' COACHING POST

VANCOUVER (CP) — Charlie Hodge said Thursday he has resigned as coach of Vancouver Nats of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Hodge, who watched his team make a quick start and then slump into last place in the league's western division, had coached the club for the last half of last season, when he took over from Alf Cadman.

The Nats have lost 16 of their last 17 games.

Jack Durston, who was coach of the Nats' farm team, Vancouver Villas of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League, will take over the team. Vancouver general-manager Gil Lundihn said Durston would be behind the bench for the game here Friday night against Flin Flon Bombers.

Hodge was a goalie with Montreal Canadiens, Oakland Seals and Vancouver Canucks in the National Hockey League and was a two-time Vezina trophy winner.

Lundihn said Durston's appointment is temporary, and that he also will continue as coach of the Villas.

Nats Battle For Ladies

By The Canadian Press

They billed the game as Ladies' Night at Ottawa's Civic Centre, but it was hardly an exhibition that would woo the ladies.

The hometown Nationals were forced to play catch-up hockey Thursday night when New England Whalers opened an early four-goal lead and finally fell 4-2 in a scrappy contest.

Elsewhere, Cleveland Crusaders kept pace with the Whalers atop the World Hockey Association's Eastern Division by defeating Quebec Les Nordiques 3-1 and Minnesota's Fighting Saints blanked Houston Aeros 3-0.

It was bonus night at fan-starved Civic Centre, but only 2,682 fans showed up in the 9,000-seat rink despite free admission to any ladies accompanied by a male companion.

Those that did make it to the arena saw a no-holds barred fight in the second period between Whalers' Tom Webster, who opened the New England scoring, and Tom Simpson of Ottawa.

The fight ended when Webster decked the Ottawa player, but the altercation signified a change in the trend of the contest.

City Pairs Claim Titles

Sisters Debbie and Maralee Bray easily claimed the senior ladies' pairs by scoring 42.8 points and five ordinals to beat out Dawn Nott and Vicki Nicholl of Glengarry Club.

Another Racquet club combination to win on home ice, Sharon Hallett and Leonard Scharbach, captured the pre-novice pairs crown as clubmates finished second and third — but mainland skaters held the upper hand in six other divisions.

It proved to be a disappointing day for Victoria's entries in the singles. Former Canadian junior champion Paul Fisher, Brenda Thomas and Dale Gorcak all placed behind the leaders after their figures.

Gorcak finished second behind Michael Moewes of the Gulf of Georgia Club in the pre-novice men's singles figures, Fisher was fourth in the men's singles while Miss Thomas was in third place.

SENIOR LADIES' PAIRS (FINAL)
1. Bebbie and Maralee Bray, Racquet Club, (5) 42.8; 2. Dawn Nott and Vicki Nicholl, Glengarry, (12) 39.3; 3. Susan Duchi and Dianne Falconer, Vernon, (14) 38.7.

Stockers Stretch Lead

Stockers North Americans padded a first-place lead to eight points Thursday night by hammering runner-up Ingraham Buckaroos 9-0 in a Victoria Intermediate Hockey League battle at Pearkes Arena.

Laurie Huck, each time on a breakaway, Don Presley, Errol Goulden and Dave Williams each scored two goals for Stockers.

Tom Tillotson, one of three players brought up from Saanich Block Brothers, the Stockers' South Island Junior "B" League affiliate, added the single and assisted on three of the other tallies.

Ken Olson had a relatively easy time recording the shutout with 22 saves. At the other end of the ice, Ron Griffis knocked aside 32 shots.

SUSPICION AT TRACK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Star-News says the West Virginia Racing Commission has begun an investigation into the running of the 10th race at Charles Town last Friday night which threatens the track with a major scandal.

The investigation centres on the 10th race trizacta in which a bettor who held a 3-8-1 ticket would have expected to collect a windfall for picking the first three finishers in order.

Andrew Byer, Star-News racing columnist, says trizacta payoffs always are difficult to guess but a bettor might have expected to collect $1,000 to $3,000 or more for his $3 investment.

The Death, and Rebirth Of Sinden's Team Canada

"A little piece of us all died today," Coach Harry Sinden of Team Canada said into a tape recorder late one memorable Saturday night in Montreal. How true!

That was Sept. 2, the historic occasion, remember, when shock and dismay spread across the Dominion.

Team Canada, reputedly the best hockey team anywhere, had been soundly thumped by the Russian Nationals, 7-3. Who can even forget it, and the other seven games of the trans-world series, either?

Not many, perhaps, but now for those who may have missed something, it's all in print. Sinden tells it like it was in his revelation "Hockey Showdown" (Doubleday, $6.95 hardcover, $3.95 paperback) a tape report really of how he lived and died every minute and every day of that series.

It's a good, historical account of the entire production, this book, from the pre-series bargaining to the final goal by Paul Henderson which gave Canada victory.

But not before some embarrassments, such as:

In that first game, the Russians actually laughed at the Canadians, and near the end of the contest when centre Phil Esposito punched a Russian in the face, there was no reprisal, ony a sly grin which obviously implied:

"Look at the scoreboard, you jerk."

Also, if Canada had gone for speed and quickness in the first game, it didn't work. The Russians were still faster, and quicker. They would have to be slowed down. Sinden would have to get the "diggers" into the game — Wayne Cashman, Jean Paul Parise, Bill Goldsworthy. The Soviets would see the other face off the NHL. They did. Canada won Game two, 4-1, and some pride had been salvaged.

U.S. Owners Held All the Cards

And so on, as each game ended, and new plans for the next were devised, Sinden told it all to a tape recorder.

In Vancouver, for instance: "The score, 5-3, was a lot closer than the game." Re the Bobby Hull case, Sinden wanted Hull, but couldn't get him, and put the blame on Clarence Campbell and officials of Hockey Canada for the "NHL-only" situation that existed. Not to forget the U.S. owners.

It was Sinden's view that "for the sake of hockey which I feel should have been the paramount factor, Hull and the others (who had jumped to the WHA) should have been allowed to play."

Then the frank admission:

"But American owners were holding the cards."

On the series generally, Sinden said:

"I'll tell you without any hesitation we were taken by the Russians. How we could ever agree to play them at that time of the year — the worst possible time for Canadians — I'll never know."

Then, there were "The Defectors." And it was here that Sinden's rancor showed. He was positively bitter.

Vic Hadfield, his ego bruised, was asked to leave when he declined Sinden's invitation to return to the club after refusing to be relegated to spot duty.

"Then, you may as well take your stuff off," was Sinden's comment. "I wasn't going to beg him to return."

Some 'Cop-Outs' He Got to Know

Then Buffalo's Rich Martin quit, to be followed by Vancouver's Jocelyn Guevremont, to whom Sinden said: "I'd be happy if you get out of here as quickly as you can." Later, there was Gilles Perrault.

Plus a delightful admission: "Their excuse of 'not being in shape' is simply a cop-out."

Oh sure, all the glories of the eventual victory are recounted, events leading up to them, the final-game referee squabble, game strategies, Alan Eagleson't final fadeout even in the eyes of the Russians; and some incidental and unforgettable occasions — like a luncheon, Russian style.

It happened in Moscow, and after the usual niceities, the toasts followed. To Sinden they were something else.

"The custom in Russia is for each man to toast everyone else. A Russian would toast one of our players . . .

"Bobby Orr . . . zip . . . over the rocks, no ice, no mix, no nothing,straight vodka.

"One of us woild do the same:

"Valeri Kharmalov . . . zip, the same thing, straight!"

"And after a few Kristals (a brand name) it didn't seem all that bad."

Matter of fact, as a statement of record, rather than a literary coup, neither is Sinden's book, I think hockey fans, and Canadians, will enjoy it.

Bombers Score on Ballots

DON JONAS
. . . favored over Ealey

MONTREAL (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who put the most points up on the scoreboard this season, have placed the most players aboard the Canadian Football League All-Canada team.

The team, chosen by ballot of the Football Reporters of Canada was announced Thursday by FRC president Pierre Proulx.

The Bombers took six of the 25 spots — there was a tie for tight end — five on offence and one on defence.

Don Jonas won the quarterback position 23 to 18 over Chuck Ealey of Hamilton Tiger-Cats. Mack Herron, runner-up in voting as most valuable player in Canada last week, was the only unanimous choice, winning top spot among the three running backs.

OFFENCE

Guards — Bob Lueck, Winnipeg; Jack Abendschan, Saskatchewan.

Tackles — Bill Frank, Winnipeg; Ed George, Montreal.

Centre — Bob Swift, Winnipeg.

DEFENCE

Tackles — Jim Stillwagon, Toronto; John Helton, Calgary.

Ends — Bill Baker, Saskatchewan; Wayne Smith, Ottawa.

Middle linebacker — Gerry Campbell, Ottawa, Ottawa.

Backs — Al Brenner, Hamilton; Johnny Williams, Hamilton; Grady Cavness, Winnipeg; Dick Adams, Ottawa; Mary Luster, Toronto.

Every team won at least one all-star spot. Hamilton was right behind Winnipeg with five; Saskatchewan Roughriders and Ottawa Rough Riders had three each; British Columbia Lions, Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts each put two aboard, while Calgary Stampeders, and Edmonton Eskimos took one position each.

Freezing Northeasterlies Doesn't Stop Steelheaders

All except for those crazy steelhead anglers!

When normal people are huddled by the fireside, repairing gear and muttering into a hot toddy, steelheaders are out on snowshoes and battling iced-up lines for a chance to catch one of these sea-run rainbows.

As Arnie Williams of Duncan said: "If he's not freezing to death, he's not happy."

The San Juan River-Harris Creek system is in fishable condition and a few anglers have been striking it lucky.

Waters are slightly low and clear, but still in prime condition, in the lower reaches of the Cowichan River and the Koksilah lacks enough water to be productive.

Further up-Island, the odd steelhead has been taken out of the Stamp and Little Qualicum rivers as well as the lower part of the Somass.

Peter Patrick of Courtenay, who arrived home with a 14-pounder, was one of the fortunates fishing the controlled-flow waters of the Puntledge River this past week.

Campbell River seems to be the only stream still producing steelhead in that general vicinity, where freezing temperatures have radically lowered stream levels.

The only spots on the Island suggested as possible trout angling meccas have been Brannen and Westwood lakes near Nanaimo, where cold-fingered fly fishermen have been hauling out several limits.

And as for salmon fishing, the winter springs are undoubtedly out there — if you care to try for them.

NIBBLES: This week's nosegay of thorns goes to the federal fisheries department . . . This sanctimonious body has asked that a meeting with the Amalgamated Conservation Society, scheduled for January after being postponed earlier this month, be off-limits to the press . . . Supposedly the theory behind this move, which the ACS will undoubtedly have to honor in order to have the meeting, is that the dialogue can be more free . . . It's understandable that they don't want to air their dirty laundry in public, but one mustn't lose sight of the fact that we, the public, pay the departmental representatives' salaries . . . There should be no room for prima donna tactics among employees of a government branch that regulates activities of vital interest to both sports and commercial fishermen.

Outdoorsmen are again reminded of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association turkey shoot Saturday and Sunday at the club's Goldstream layout. . . . Hours are from 9 a.m. 'til dark each day . . . Included in the competition are trap shooting, archery, .22 rifle running deer, lucky wheels and lucky circles.

New Storm Hits Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, accused commissioner Bowie Kuhn Thursday of making a fraudulent statement and said player negotiations had been set back by "an act that only the most rank amateur would perform."

Miller said he was referring to a news conference held by the commissioner in Hawaii Nov. 29 at which, he insisted, Kuhn violated an understanding between owners' and players' negotiating committees to resolve their problems privately and not in a public forum.

"Not only has Mr. Khun shown questionable integrity in breaking that agreement," said Miller, "he has performed an extremely destructive act in terms of negotiations."

Kuhn had no immediate comment.

Miller called a news conference to detail some of the facets of the latest conflict which he had touched upon informally a week ago.

"The commissioner's act has only served to harden the players' position," he added.

He declined, however, to predict that baseball may again be hit by a players' strike such as the unprecedented action last spring that delayed opening of the regular season 10 days.

"A strike occurs only when there is a complete falldown of negotiations, when there is an impasse.

"We have not reached that stage yet. We are still negotiating. It is our hope that we can still reach an amicable nd practical agreement. We have another meeting scheduled next Tuesday."

He said that at the Hawaii news conference, Kuhn outlined an owners' proposal for modifying the stringent reserve clause, which binds a player to one club for life unless he is sold or traded. Kuhn said the players had rejected the plan, which he labelled historic and spectacular.

"Those words were clearly intended to deceive the public and players," Miller said. "His predictions of catastrophe if the terms were not accepted were a transparent and inept attempt to psych the players and the fans."

The owners' proposal, as presented by Kuhn, called for free agent status for any player with five years' major league experience not offered at least $30,000 for his sixth year or a player of eight years' experience not offered $40,000 for his ninth year.

"Were it presently in effect, this magnanimous offer would probably affect five of the 960 players now on major league rosters," Miller said.

Miller said the owners actually were offering the players salary increase of one-half of one per cent, and even less than that if owners were allowed to go through with the suggestion that rosters be cut from 25 to 23 men.

He charged that baseball salaries fall below those in the other major professional sports — football, basketball and hockey — and cited the National Basketball Association's minimum of $20,000 compared with baseball's $14,000 as an example.

"We are seeking a base pay of $15,500 in 1973, then $16,500 in 1974 and $17,500 in 1975," Miller said.

"These are not unreasonable demands. Most people are brainwashed with the idea that pro sports don't make money."

Miller outlined other player demands, which he said were presented as a counter-proposal to the owners' offer on Nov. 17:

- After five years as a professional player, three in the major leagues, a player would become a free agent if he is earning less than the average big league salary now figured around $32,000. After seven years, five in the majors, he would be able to make his own deal if not earning one and a half times the average and after nine years if not making twice the average.
- Regardless of salary, a player would become a free agent after seven, 12 and 17 years in the majors.
- Each year, 10 players from a team's master roster of 40 and five from the varsity roster of 25 would be freed of the reserve clause restrictions.
- If a player and his team have not agreed to a contract by Feb. 1, the dispute would be submitted to binding arbitration.
- If a player is traded, he may ask his new team to reopen contract negotiations. If they fail to agree, the matter goes to binding arbitration.

West-United Plans to Play

Old Man Winter's icy hand has clamped down hard on the outdoor sports scene this weekend in Victoria.

Frozen fields have forced postponement of all Saturday matches in the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association; all Sunday matches in both the Vancouver Island and Victoria and District soccer leagues as well as all weekend action in the Victoria Rugby Union.

Invictus has also postponed, until Dec. 17, a 21-mile mixed medley relay race scheduled for Sunday at Beacon Hill Park.

The only outdoor games still scheduled to go ahead are the Pacific Coast Soccer League encounter on Saturday and two matches in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association on Sunday.

Victoria West-United officials announced Thursday night that they had received permission from the city parks department to use Royal Athletic Park for the 2 p.m. soccer match against New Westminter Blues on Saturday.

Victoria's Gorge Molsons, who took over first place from West-United last weekend, hope to face Norburn the same day in an interlocking match at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Boxers Snap Tie for Lead

London Boxing Club sparred most of the way and then unloaded a big scoring punch in the closing minutes to defeat Hotel Douglas 71-60 and break a tie for first place in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League encounter Thursday night at S. J. Willis Junior High School.

The lead changed several times in the first half and the score was tied 34-34 at the intermission. Following resumption of play, the lead switched back and forth again before Boxers scored six consecutive field goals to make it 65-58.

Hotelmen got back one basket but Boxers sealed the victory and gained sole possession of the lead sinking three foul shots and another basket.

Vikings Tackle Portland Squad

Turnovers and erratic shooting are two problems coach Gary Taylor hopes to solve tonight when his University of Victoria Vikings take on Lewis and Clark College of Portland in an exhibition basketball game at 8:30 at UVic Gym.

Vikings had trouble finding the shooting range and coughed up the ball 30 times in last Tuesday's 64-59 loss to Simon Fraser Clansmen in Vancouver.

Vikings will be without Brent Mullins, out until after Christmas with an ankle sprain, and Walt Burrows, who no longer is with the team.

That leaves much of the load with guards Harry Hunter and Corky Jossul and forward Chris Hall, currently fourth in the Canada West University Athletic Association individual scoring race with 85 points and a 14.2 points-a-game average.

Sailing Eyes Swing to East

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

OK dinghy enthusiasts, and other sailing addicts for that matter, will be keeping eyes on their eastern competition now that Ib Andersen has taken over the helm as technical director of the Ontario Sailing Association.

The 27-year-old Dane, who gave up law to become probably the best professional coach in the world, has made the OK dinghy his forte.

Ib became a champion when he was 10, winning the Danish Optimist Pram crown. Since then he's made his reputation in Snipes, 505s, Flying Dutchmans, Finns and Dragons. But it's the OK circle in which he really shines.

Ib, who has coached the Spanish and Mexican sailing teams, figures it will take eight years to put Canadian sailing in shape.

His main job in Ontario will be to find and train young sailors and build up a strong Ontario team.

Andersen, one of nine to apply for the job, will get a $12,000 salary.

If the cold snap keeps up frostbiters of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will earn their name Saturday when racing gets under way 1:30 p.m. at Cadboro Bay.

Louise Anstey was way out in front last Saturday, beating out all competition in the fleet. Settling for second and third spots were Rick McBride and Colin Huggett.

Humphrey Golby took time out from campaigning as an aldermanic candidate in Oak Bay to win top place in Davidsons, being trailed by Gordie Hobson and Jim Davis.

Walter Roots with daughter Alison as crew won the Enterprise November series.

Enterprises are very much of a family-campaigned boat. Ted Bowers and his son Mark placed second, while in third place was Shirley Jefferson and her laughter Donna.

Family racing is also the name of the game in X-class racing. Doug Gray and his wife Rosemary won the series, beating out Charles Simpson who uses his two youngsters as crew.

Tim Roots was top El Toro sailor, being trailed by Tara Kenning and Ian Pickles.

Boats of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club will have their last six-miler of the fall Sunday series this weekend. Start time is 10 a.m. off Sidney.

There were 38 boats competing Saturday when they raced in 25-knot nor'easterlies that made the race one of the fastest on record, the first boat making it over the finish line in one hour and 15 minutes.

Placing after her were Bob Heath's Venja, Don White's Ballad, Will Jensen's Viking 28; Miles Dighton's Obession and Ivor Pearson's Marionette.

Obession's crew have to be gluttons for punishment. They made the trek down from Sidney to Oak Bay the next day, doing eight knots under bare pole part of the time!

They arrived there only to find that Turkey Head Sailing Association had decided to cancel its two races because of stormy conditions that produced winds of 50 knots.

Shorebound last weekend, several THSA boats are expected to join RVYC for a long-distance race Sunday, which is due to start 10 a.m. off the Flower Island mark.

New Dodge Electronic Ignition System. It makes your life a little simpler.

The first question you're going to ask is, what is it?

The second. How is it going to simplify my life?

O.K., to answer the first part. In any conventional ignition system the mechanical breaker points may be the cause of some problems. Knowing this, Chrysler engineers developed a solid-state electronic system (all 6 & 8 cyl. engines) that eliminates the need for breaker points and condenser, and their resulting maintenance headaches.

That essentially, is what the new system is.

Now for what it can do for your car and your wallet.

DODGE BUILDS IN THE SOLID DIFFERENCE

What will it mean to your pocketbook? Because there are no points to wear out, no condenser to replace, the cost of tune-ups drops considerably.

New front disc brakes, (except Dart with 6 cylinder engines), unibody construction, torsion-bar suspension (except Colt) and new emission control systems are among the impressive list.

Innovative engineering plus extra care in every detail, make us believe your new Dodge is the best Dodge we've ever built.

Farmers Face Bleak Christmas

EDMONTON (CP) — Farmers in the Peace River region of northwestern Alberta face a bleak Christmas in the wake of drought, hail, winds and a series of wet, heavy snowfalls that combined to kill this year's crops.

Left with thousands of acres of crops totally written off, area farmers, through farm organizations, asked for assistance.

The provincial agriculture department now is trying to get the federal government to pay 50 per cent of the cost of an aid plan.

Mrs. Hemmingway, a National Farmers Union director in the region, told a meeting of about 150 farmers they should plan to march on provincial welfare offices rather than selling their livestock or seeking off-farm jobs away from their communities.

Cooling Costly

EDMONTON (CP) — Calgary Power Ltd. may spend as much as $31.2 million on an experimental water-cooling system which is expected to reduce the weed problem at Wabamun Lake 40 miles west of the city.

The cooling system is being installed at the company's Sundance coal-fired power plant on the south shore of the lake. Cottage owners have complained for several years that lake water, after being used as a coolant, has promoted weed growth by increasing the temperature of the lake.

Mothers Picket

CALGARY (CP) — Six mothers braved the temperature of 20 degrees below Wednesday to picket CFAC Television because it has refused to show the program Sesame Street.

Books 'Obscene'

REGINA (CP) — Hundreds of magazines, pocket books and a varity of other publications seized from four bookstores early this year were declared obscene by a district court judge.

Judge R. H. McClelland ruled in his judgment that the publications "before me are in the class of hard core pornography and I find them obscene."

The type of material seized by city police in January and February ran the gamut of classifications from "girlie books" to "doctor books" to "sex comic books."

Air Ambulance Set

EDMONTON (CP) — An air ambulance service to serve oil companies in the high Arctic has been organized by Mackenzie Air Ltd. of Edmonton.

The Medevac system uses a Lear 25 executive jet aircraft and eight doctors. The aircraft is kept on stanby here while the doctors are based in Yellowknife, N.W.T.

Welfare Proposed

RYCROFT, Alta. (CP) — If requests for federal-provincial assistance are not met, farmers in the central Peace region of Alberta should be prepared to seek welfare, Anne Hemmingway said Wednesday.

Canada Could Become a 'Data Haven'

OTTAWA (CP) — A significant amount of information about Canadians is stored in data banks in the United States. This may not be the danger to individual privacy that some imagine but it could pose a danger to Canada's culture.

There is a danger that Canada, without significant legislation dealing with data banks, may become a "data haven" where foreign businesses would store information.

These are conclusions reached in a report on privacy and the computer released Thursday after a federal task-force study of more than 1½ years.

The task force, organized by the communications and justice departments, reached its conclusions after studying, among other things, 13 major United States data banks and one other foreign bank.

The report says there are no striking differences in the vulnerability of information stored in computers in Canada and the U.S.

"Yet the volume of this type of data, and the sensitivity of much of it, raises questions that relate not so much to possible invasions of privacy as to possible invasions of culture.

"Business activity may be lost to the country; so also may be that fragile entity, Canadian culture, which is and certainly will be increasingly as sensitive to the content of computerized information systems as it is to the content of broadcasting programs."

It says the invasion of culture could come through the fact that data systems used by Canadians may contain information contributed exclusively or at least preponderantly by non Canadian sources.

But the study says that at least Canadians have the protection of U.S. privacy laws when information about them is stored in American computers.

These laws may be more protective than any legislation in Canada.

Further, the report says that since many Canadian information collection agencies are branches of American companies, the protection afforded by American law may spill over into Canada.

The report expresses fear that if Canadian legislation does not keep pace with that of other countries the country could become a "data haven."

QFL 'Linked With Crime'

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Construction Union Thursday charged that international unions affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labor have connections with organized crime.

The union, an affiliate of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, made public a report charging that some leaders of unions affiliated with the QFL have criminal records, that the union uses goons to intimidate workers on construction sites or as union delegates and that some of the unions practice usury.

"Half the members of the executive of the Construction Trades Council have criminal records," said the report released by Florent Audette, executive director of the union.

The council is made up of various international construction unions affiliated with the QFL.

The charges were the latest in the official 40-day "raiding period" under provincial law during which unions from the two labor federations can try to persuade workers to switch allegiance.

Earlier Thursday, in Sept Iles, Que., a Superior Court judge awarded the CNTU an injunction ordering the QFL to refrain from using "intimidating tactics" to persuade workers at a construction site to change sides.

CNTU lawyers had argued in their petition that about 50 QFL strongmen had recently used "illegal and criminal" tactics to force CNTU workers off the site when they refused to join the QFL.

The official raiding season ends Dec. 12.

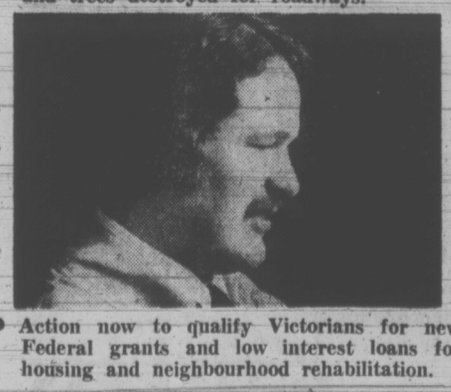
SAM BAWLF stands for:

- Holding the line against property tax increases to the homeowner. A fairer share of taxes must be paid from Provincial Government properties.
- Establishing a planning dialogue between City Hall and neighbourhoods through council-appointed citizen's committees.
- Firm policies for protection of Victoria's heritage, including Beacon Hill Park, the waterfront, and Old Town. No more boulevards and trees destroyed for roadways.



- Action now to qualify Victorians for new Federal grants and low interest loans for housing and neighbourhood rehabilitation.
- Channel future development into under-used lands within easy walking distance of downtown to avoid further neighbourhood disruption and traffic congestion.
- A positive atmosphere of co-operation in City Hall . . . responsible leadership from elected officials.

Our idea of a best seller list.

We figured that if we took everybody's favourite food, cooked it some zippy new ways, and treated our customers like our friends, a lot of nice people would come for dinner. Again and again.

ENTERTAINMENT GUIDE

ARE YOU A BEEF EATER?—Once you've tried the Old Bailey BEEFEATER at The Wilson Motor Inn you will be. You'll love the perfectly prepared roast prime rib, thick cut, or the tender and tasty English cut DELICIOUS. And it comes with hors d'oeuvres, tossed salad, your own loaf of bread, garlic or regular butter, baked potato and a choice selection of cheeses for dessert. All of this is yours for as little as $3.75. Visit the BEEFEATER at The Wilson Motor Inn. It's the best value in town.

The crowds continue to grow at The WIG & DICKIE CABARET. The most fun in Victoria happens every evening Tuesday to Saturday beginning at 8:30 p.m. at The WIG & DICKIE CABARET at The Wilson Motor Inn, 850 Blanshard St. It's the very best entertainment Great Britain has to offer. If you've ever spent a night in an English Inn you'll know what we mean. George McDowall and The Lads will have you singing, laughing and really enjoying yourself. Don't be left out, phone 385-6787 and reserve your spot at the Wig & Dickie Cabaret.

Scientist Predicts New Role for Sex

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Friendshiip, more than kinship, will underlie future human relations, and tomorrow's couples will engage openly in sexual relations with friends and other couples, says a British biologist and medical researcher.

In an article entitled Sexuality in a Zero Growth Society in the December issue of Center Report, Dr. Alexander Comfort says today's trend toward swinging "marks the end, or the beginning of the end, of proprietary sexual attitudes."

Mate-sharing, says Comfort, is a "realistic view of the needs of couples and individuals for variety" and a "recognition that the meeting of needs rather than their frustration is a gift which expresses love . . . and strengthens the primary bond."

Comfort says he expects "to see a society in which pair relationships are still central but initially less permanent, in which childbearing is seen as a special responsibility involving a special life style and in which settled couples engage openly in a wide range of sexual relations with friends, with other couples and with third parties as an expression of social intimacy, without prejudice to the primacy of their own relationship."

The old have been increasingly isolated by the decline of the kinship family, says Comfort, and would benefit most from "a 'spreading' of the couple-preoccupied family into something like a tribe of friends.

"We are not here talking about change which we can further or prevent, simply about changes which are now taking place."

Center Report is the monthly publication of the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions, a non-profit educational research institute here.

Ontario Minister Urges More Power to Provinces

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Canadian confederation will not survive unless Ottawa gives more of its power to the provinces, John White, Ontario's minister of industry and tourism, said Thursday.

Canada must have "a much looser confederation or run the risk of having no confederation at all," Mr. White said in a speech to about 60 people at Fanshawe College.

He criticized the federal government for not recognizing the trend to greater citizen participation and the swing in the balance of power back to the local level.

Regional governments are the province's attempts to deauthority, he said. Ontario is creating "larger, stronger, richer, more sophisticated and more efficient municipalities" to which Queen's Park can pass on more responsibilities.

"There is no doubt the alteration in the balance of power will be continued."

He said he hoped municipal governments would become more responsive to the people and predicted some form of party politics would be essential to achieve it.

CHRYSLER PRICES UP

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp., which raised its prices an average of $20 a car on Oct. 17, boosted them another $40 Wednesday, thus using up virtually all of a $60.10 increase the Federal Price Commission approved for the auto firm.

In Canada the increase is $37.

Chrysler said the $60.10 grant was necessary to defray costs of federally required safety, bumper and emissions control items on its 1973 cars.

Chrysler said tht even after the federal government gave its go-ahead for the $60.10 increase, the firm initially boosted its prices only $20 per unit "because of the competitive market situation."

The increases range from zero on the Plymouth Regent V-8 station wagon to $100 on the Le Baron two-door and four-door hardtop models.

Full Community Use Promised for Church

Duncan Bureau
Phone: 746-6181

DUNCAN — The new $250,000 St. Edward's Roman Catholic Church complex here will be for all the community to use, says building committee member John Getz.

"We feel that it would be rather selfish for any group with a building as we have here to keep it only for our people's use," he said.

The church is at Tzouhalem and Maple Bay Road.

Getz said the multi-purpose church portion of the complex, which will seat 465, will be available for rental to responsible groups for concerts, musicals, symphonies and films. The atmosphere of the church can be changed in minutes to suit various functions, he said.

"All the seats plus the altar are portable and easily moved," he said. "Acoustics are really good and the seating is semi-circular around the platform," he said.

"The church concept has changed so much we feel we can do this. Ten or 15 years ago it would have been unthinkable."

The 350 seating capacity banquet room and kitchen facilities will be available for conventions and dances.

All projects will come before the church's council for approval. As well as the multi-purpose church and the banquet facilities, the structure includes an administration area and a rectory, living quarters for two priests and accommodations for guests.

In the church there are also three figures imported from Italy behind the altar. The six-foot high "glorified Christ" cost $800 while the Mary and Joseph figures cost $500 each.

Getz said that money for the project was raised through the 435-member parish.

Although the church has been used for services since Nov. 12, the complex will be officially opened tonight at 7:30 by Bishop Remi De Roo. Also in attendance will be Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson, Highways Minister Robert Strachan and their wives.

Tonight's ceremonies will be for members of the parish only. On Sunday the facilities will be open to Cowichan Valley residents from 2 to 5 p.m.

Regular services are at 7:30 Saturday evening and 8:30 and 10:30 Sunday mornings.

Parish Pastor Rev. Harry McIntee said the next project will be to build a senior citizens' centre.

Appeal May Disband

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Directors of the Thompson-Nicola United Appeal, frustrated by three straight years of failing to reach their fund drive goal, voted Thursday night to disband the service. The Kamloops Red Cross maintained such a decision could only be made at a general meeting, and if the challenge is upheld the motion to disband will be presented to a general meeting next month.

$220,000 Spent Fighting Fly Ash

NORTH COWICHAN — MacMillan Bloedel's Chemainus sawmill division has not "shrugged off or ignored" the mill's fly ash problem, says mill manager Tom Hanna.

The Chemainus-Crofton and District Chamber of Commerce demanded in a letter to municipal council Wednesday that "immediate action be taken to curb or stop this fly ash problem in Chemainus."

The association said it is felt that with all the correspondence that has transpired in the past few years, "no definite action has been taken to improve or help this situation. For the betterment of this community, we would not like to see just correspondence passing back and forth, as in previous years, and the problem being shrugged off or ignored."

Hanna assured council by letter that more than $220,000 has been spent on the problem over the past 18 months.

He said that, with many changes made in the power plant, as well as the increased purchase of hydro power by about $40,000 to reduce the steam load on the power boilers which supply power for the mill's turbine, fly ash emissions have been reduced.

"We recognize that fly ash is a problem and a great deal of work is being done to bring about further reduction of emission," Hanna said. "For instance, MB engineers are developing a new system for a pre-drying of hog fuel to produce more efficient burning which will reduce fly ash emissions."

Ald. Tom Burge disagreed with the chamber's accusations and said the mill is trying to curb the problem and "I just hope they will continue to work so that it will be able to be cured completely."

As chairman of the municipality's pollution control committee, Burge said he had written to the B.C. Research Council asking if there are any bad effects from flyash.

"Apart from the nuisance factor they assured me that there are no toxic effects", he said.

SHIRLEY DOWELL
RE-ELECT
OAK BAY ALDERMAN

One of the most important responsibilities of civic government is determining how land will be used. James Lorimer (a Toronto writer) in his just published book "A Citizen's Guide to City Politics," describes how within the last few years people because of the importance of land use, have become aware of the vital stake they have in civic government. Until this newly developed awareness, city councils across Canada were, if not controlled, heavily influenced by the property industry. Lorimer points out in his book that some members of this industry which includes developers, builders and real estate agents often seek to use land for maximum profit irrespective of the consequences to the local citizenry and their wishes. Large highrises and miles of blacktop shopping centres were built throughout Canada without thought for the impact on the environment, or the wishes of the local citizen. The style and quality of life in whole neighborhoods were ruthlessly destroyed.

Across Canada there has developed resistance to the pressures of the property industry. The view is growing that civic government should take into account the feelings of the entire citizenry. Not all growth must stop but it must be along lines consistent with the character of the local district and consistant with the views and wishes of the community.

SHIRLEY DOWELL believes that land is our most important resource, and must not be used as a vehicle for uncontrolled growth and a quick profit at the expense of the local community. SHIRLEY DOWELL, if re-elected to Council, will continue her fight to insure that Oak Bay Council does not become a rubber stamp for the property industry. Thus her opposition to a new shopping centre at Foul Bay and Cadboro Bay Roads. She has, and will continue to vote against spot zoning, or allowing more areas to be zoned for apartment use. When apartments are built in presently zoned areas, she will fight to insure that they are not highrises, and that the standard of their construction is of high quality.

Land must not be used as a vehicle for quick profit, irrespective of the consequences to the municipality. The use of land must remain the concern of all Oak Bay citizens. To continue the fight for the integrity of your neighborhood and municipality, RE-ELECT SHIRLEY DOWELL.

Grain Saving Measured By Mouthful

PEKING (Reuter — The Chinese people were urged Thursday to save a mouthful of grain a day following predictions of a four-per cent drop in this year's grain crop.

The call, in the theoretical journal Red Flag, stressed the need for China to build up its grain reserves against the threat of future war.

It appeared critical of the the Soviet Union's wheat purchases abroad without mentioning China's own buying on the world market this year, so far unpublicized in China.

Writer Hung Chiao said: "If every person saved a mouthful of grain each day, in a whole year China would save million of jin."

"A jin is a special measure used for rice and crops and 100 jin equals 133 pounds.

China has already made at least five international grain buys this year — from Canada, Australia and indirectly from the United States — and the total world sales to Peking in 1972 could reach six million tons, sources said.

U.S. Crime Crackdown

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The second sweeping crackdown on organized crime here in two months was announced Thursday in indictments against 25 persons for crimes including drug smuggling, attempted murder and loan sharking.

The indictments resulted from lengthy investigations in Canada, Argentina, Chile, Mexico and Japan as well as the United States.

Vincent Rizzo, a New York salesman, 41, was charged with nine of the 19 indictments with attempted murder, smuggling cocaine, three counts of extortion and sale of conterfeit U.S. currency.

In October, numerous indictments were issued against the top five New York Mafia families, resulting from a six-month watch by agents on an alleged underworld headquarters in a Brooklyn junkyard.

Engineers Okay Datsun Brakes

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department says an independent engineering board has found that the Datsun model 240-Z does not have a brake defect.

The department had ordered the study after allegations that the automobile's brakes were defective.

The board, however, found a problem related to the front disc brakes of the car.

Accumulations of dirt and foreign substances from the road have been found on the brake pads, necessitating an increase in the pedal pressure required to decelerate or stop.

The department said no serious safety-related incidents were encountered during the study.

Evidence indicated that the brakes are especially vulnerable to deterioration in winter months, due to concentrations of salt and sand on the roads.

OAK BAY

JOHN EAMER-GOULT
for ALDERMAN

I strongly support a recreation centre in Oak Bay but suggest that the only fair way to achieve its construction is through a referendum of the ratepayers of the municipality.

There is every likelihood that Federal and Provincial funds will be available to help bear construction costs. In this connection, the Provincial Government announced last weekend that it will pay up to one-third of the expense of recreation facilities costing less than $1,000,000.

Swapping public land with private contractors is not a proper way to deal with the people's business. Acceptance of the proposed Riding Academy deal would have resulted in three high rise towers in a prime single family home area in exchange for only a basic ice rink. The developer declined to have the proposed work supervised by Oak Bay's appointed architect.

A rink and pool by all means, but only achieved in a way consistent with the proper conduct of public business.

Doctors often prescribe drugs for hyperactive children out of desperation

In this, the fourth article in a five-part series, the Times examines problem of hyperactivity, a handicap that's often difficult to diagnose in young children.

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The hyperactive child's over-all performance may be above average, but he's lumped in with the handicapped because he's a master at raising hell.

By the time these difficult-to-diagnose problem children are referred to Victoria's Pacific Centre for Human Development — an institution that helps emotionally disturbed children get back on the right track — most have consumed enormous amounts of drugs prescribed by doctors for their hyperactivity.

React Badly

The centre's director, Dr. Charles Gregory, says some of the children react badly to these drugs: some drool at the mouth, some gain weight, and, many walk around as if in a cloud.

"Enormous amounts — much more than the safe dosages for adults — are prescribed for some of these children; they build up a tolerance; the dosage is increased; secondary results start appearing; and more drugs are prescribed to treat the secondary effects," said Gregory.

Hyperactivity was John's problem.

"Nothing we did in the way of discipline seemed to do any good," said his mother. "We were frustrated and he didn't seem to respond to anything we did.

"Although he went to bed well every night, he'd often wake up at four in the morning. And, during the day, we could never get him to sit down," Mrs. R. recalled.

"I remember he completely demolished a doctor's office; used to push old ladies off the sidewalk for no reason; and anytime our daughter got more attention than him, he beat up on her."

A physician prescribed tranquilizers for John but he continued to torment his sister. He threw her on the sidewalk, tried to "bash her head in" and, on several occasions, tried to "squash her between doors."

"It wasn't easy to love a kid like that," said Mrs. R.

Another doctor suggested psychiatric treatment. Eventually John was placed in Vancouver General Hospital, and later dismissed with the diagnosis, "mental retardation and hyperactivity."

That diagnosis was to follow John for years.

More tranquilizers were prescribed and the dosage increased.

Professionals agreed the boy was severely retarded and belonged in a hospital for children who could not function in society. They said it was possibly one of the effects of meningitis which the boy had contacted at the age of one.

"I hated the idea of tranquilizers, but we had to keep him on them to quiet him down. We didn't give him as much during the summer though," said Mrs. R., "because his skin was so sensitive."

John's mother just "couldn't take" the thought of an institution for her child because "he was so bright".

But she couldn't handle him at home either.

Phoned Phil

"But we didn't get anywhere so I phoned Phil Gaglardi (then minister of welfare in the Bennett government).

"Months went by and nothing was done so we started to get people to put pressure on him (Gaglardi) and John was finally referred to the Pacific Centre."

John was taken off tranquilizers as soon as he walked in the centre's door.

"We're prepared to deal with what happens, so it's policy to take these children off drugs. But the interesting thing is nothing happens," said Gregory.

Now, more than a year later, John is ready to return to his parents. He's started public school and shows amazing ability in arithmetic.

He has been introduced to the highly-structured education system and his family has started to deal constructively with his inappropriate behavior.

For example, John is now reinforced with praise for sitting in his chair without misbehaving, whereas before the only reinforcement he received stemmed from causing a ruckus.

"We're really excited. He can understand now that he's not going to get all the attention," said Mrs. R.

"When he was home for six weeks during the summer, he and his sister got along pretty well. They had their normal share of bugging each other but that was all."

There's only one problem. "Because we haven't changed our neighborhood, he'll already labelled as a boy that had problems."

The centre offers a parent-teaching program, in which parents join the staff in learning how to deal with hyperactive children.

The public education system is one of the major obstacles however, Gregory said.

In the centre's program, a change of atmosphere and academic subject is regulated every 20 minutes, and lengthened until it's possible for the child to cope wih the regular school system.

Then the child begins to go to public school while living in the centre, said another centre spokesman.

"Hyperactivity is the end product of an enormous range of possible reasons," said Gregory.

"It's a combination of what the child was born with and what they learn it is necessary to do before they get attention.

"Parents and teachers have to be taught how to dole out their attention in these cases. The attention is going to be given anyway. It's just they have to find out the best way."

There are no statistics on the number of children who suffer from hyperactivity.

Dr. Philip Ney, a local child psychologist, describes three types of "hyperkinetic behavior".

But in all cases the hyperactive child is hard to tolerate. He never sits down long enough to stay out of trouble, and after repeated negative reactions from parents and teachers, he can react in one of three ways.

He can opt out of society which has only reacted in a negative way towards him. He can say it's his fault and become depressed. Or he can become the class clown who often keeps on clowning after everyone has stopped laughing.

She Knows What It's Like to Be Hungry, Homeless

When the Second World War broke out, Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova was forced to flee her native Czechoslovakia.

She knows how it feels to be hungry and without a home.

After working with the American Unitarian Service Committee (USC) helping persecuted families in southern France, Dr. Hitschmanova came to Canada in 1942, determined to set up a new USC in this country.

With permission of the American organization and help from some Unitarian churches in Canada, Dr. Hitschmanova set to work.

The plight of children in Europe whose parents had died in battle or in concentration camps brought an immediate response from Canadians coast to coast who began, through the USC, to send food, clothing and medical aid to the homeless waifs.

Since those first relief programs began Canadians have sent more than 21 million pounds of supplies overseas.

In 27 years of service it has worked in war-torn Europe, in Greece following its civil (sic) strife and in Korea, where 50,000 war orphans were left begging in the streets in 1952.

Today the USC is in 13 countries, providing emergency aid as well as development funds.

Dr. Hitschmanova, as executive director, travels around the world every year to pinpoint areas of urgent need.

USC PLANS to build 1,000 houses for Bangladesh returnees at an average cost of $140 per unit.

The USC is non-denominational though it retains the name Unitarian in recognition of the great assistance received from Unitarian Church members in its founding days.

Dr. Hitschmanova stresses the most important rule of the USC is "that the maximum part of every dollar contributed must go to work overseas."

The USC has never paid for publicity. Newspapers, radio and television stations all provide free coverage for the organization.

This year the USC hopes to raise $1,500,000 in its fund raising campaign which closes Christmas Day.

Money will go to more than 100 projects around the world, including the largest feeding program ever initiated.

The most urgent and major program this Christmas in the USC's construction of homes in Bangladesh, where 10 million refugees returned to their war-shattered homeland to find millions of homes destroyed.

The USC has pledged to have 1,000 new bamboo houses built for Bangladesh by Christmas.

Anyone wishing to donate to the USC's 1972 campaign may do so by sending contributions to P.O. Box 300, Victoria, or taking them to any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia. Official receipts will be sent from Unitarian Service Committee headquarters in Ottawa.

Gender Issue Not Evident In Local Vote

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Women's rights, women's status and women voters are topics that aren't rearing their controversial heads in Saturday's civic election.

A survey of female candidates shows that the subject — more than topical in recent federal and provincial level elections — has not been used for campaigning power during the past few weeks.

"People vote for the person and the platform whether it's a man or a woman," said Mrs. Shirley Dowell who is contesting one of four aldermanic posts in Oak Bay.

Mrs. Dowell, of 3270 Upper Terrace, says she's "not a women's lib type anyway" and is concentrating on keeping high-rises and large shopping developments out of Oak Bay.

Mrs. Joyce Heynsbroek and Mrs. Margaret Richards, the only women to cntest four aldermanic vacancies for two year terms in Victoria, agree, although Mrs. Richards thinks "it's about time Victoria had a woman alderman.

She said "it's up to the women to put us on (council). We stand if only the women will vote for us."

Mrs. Lily Wilson who retired in 1969, after 14 years as alderman, was the last woman to sit on Victoria city council. Her mother, Mrs. Margaret Christie, sat as alderman for 10 years before Mrs. Wilson, and retired in 1954.

Mrs. Heynsbroek had this to say:

"I don't think that women's rights are any more special interest than the rights of children or pensioners or any other group that needs a fair shake at the stick.

"I've tried to regard the whole population and look for the areas of concern and try to concentrate on those. Many affect women, such as low cost housing."

Mrs. Heynsbroek, who ran seventh out of 11 candidates in the last civic election (1971) and polled 2,725 votes, wants to help the process of giving the city back to the people—both men and women.

"Politicians at all levels have got to come down out of their ivory towers and listen to what people are saying, because people are saying things."

Mrs. Nora Lindsay, the only woman running for an aldermanic post in Saanich, thinks women are concerned about the same things as their husbands, especially in the area of zoning.

"People want to preserve their residential areas."

"Women on the whole are far more likely to estimate the value of the candidates running on council whether the candidates are male or female," said Mrs. Lindsay who works with her husband at W. J. Lindsay Ltd., a real estate firm.

The two women candidates contesting the greater Victoria School District board's five vacancies would like to see more women in the school board's administration positions.

Says Mrs. Mimi Robertson a housewife and folksinger: "I'd like to encourage women to apply for administration positions."

Mrs. Lavinia Greenwood, 52 an incumbent who won her seat in a byelection last March, said she doesn't think it's the school board's fault that there's a lack of women in these positions. "It's just that the women aren't coming forward to apply."

The Status of Women Action Group (SWAG) has not officially backed any of the women candidates.

Kathleen Ruff, SWAG president, said women have been encouraged to find out the candidates that have a genuine commitment to the problems and back them.

"I don't think women's status is an issue in this election. I don't think I've heard any candidate make any comment on the importance of women's status. And it's one issue that is important in municipal elections. It's close to home.

"It seems to me people don't want to see the problems on their own doorstep," she said.

Area Housewives Show Well in Contest

Her recipe for buttermilk biscuits won one of the $5.00 prizes in a Western Canada contest.

Victoria housewives did well in the contest — 15 out of 150 prizes in the $5.00 category went to residents of the Greater Victoria area.

Dale says she invented her prize-winning recipe to use up buttermilk after making butter. In those days, she used up 100 pounds of flour every three weeks baking for her family.

BUTTERMILK BISCUITS

1 tsp. salt
3 tbs. margarine or butter
2 tsps. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
2 cups all purpose flour
1 cup buttermilk

Sift dry ingredients. Rub shortening into flour until mixture resembles course meal. Make a well in the centre and add buttermilk. Gradually stir in the flour. Roll out dough on a floured board to ¼ or ½ inch thickness. Cut out biscuits with a floured biscuit cutter.

Place biscuits on a well greased cookie sheet or cake pan and bake in a quick oven (425 to 450 degrees F.).

VARIATIONS

Roll out dough and spread with melted butter. Sprinkle with a mixture of brown sugar and cinnamon. Roll up dough and cut into one-inch slices. Bake at about 400 degrees F.

Add 2 tbs. sugar and ½ cup raisins or currants to the basic biscuit dough to make sweet scones. Roll out and cut into triangles. Bake at 425 degress F.

Mrs. Mary Tait, 525 Burnside Road, won two prizes with her Scottish grandmother's recipes for Achiltibuie Skirlie and Corsar lemon curd.

ACHILTIBUIE SKIRLIE
(Serves 4)

3 large onions sliced
¼ pound butter
1 cup oat meal or rolled oats
½ tsp. salt
One eighth tsp. black pepper

Saute onions in butter in a heavy skillet over medium-low heat. When onions are golden, add the oatmeal, salt and pepper. Stir ingredients and cover. cook slowly for 15 to 20 minutes stirring once half way through the cooking period. Shake pan from time to time to prevent sticking.

CORSAR LEMON CURD
(2 cups)

¼ pound butter
juice and rind of 2 lemons
2 tbs. cornstarch
2 eggs
1 cup sugar

Melt butter in top of double boiler. Mix cornstarch with juice and rind of 2 lemons and combine slowly with the butter.

Beat eggs and sugar together throughly over low heat until mixtue thickens. do not and blend slowly into butter mixture. cook allow to boil. Store in refrigerater.

HOT SLAW FOR SAUSAGES

3 tbs. butter
4-5 cups well packed, shredded green cabbage
1 tsp. salt.
1 tsp. sugar
½ tsp pepper
2 tbs. cider vinegar
½ cup dairy sour cream

Melt butter in a large frying pan. Add cabbage and stir until it is well coated with fat, cook five to eight minutes over low heat, stirring often. The cabbage should be softened but not fried.

Place cabbage in a warm bowl and add remaining ingredients. Toss mixture until thoroughly blended. Serve with pork or beef sausage.

She left out the mayonnaise and celery and substituted apples and fruit cocktail.

RHUBARB SALAD

4 cups cut-up rhubarb
¼ cup water
1 cup sugar
2 three-ounce packages of strawberry gelatin
1 cup chopped apple
1 cup well drained fruit cocktail

Place rhubarb in a saucepan, add water and sugar, cover and bring to a boil. Turn heat down to medium high and continue cooking until a thick sauce forms (about five minutes).

Remove from heat and add strawberry gelatin. Stir until dissolved. Set saucepan in cold water or in refrigerator until mixture begins to thicken. Stir in the apple and well drained fruit cocktail.

Pour mixture into a jelly mold or individual molds and chill until set. Unmold and serve with whipped cream.

Mrs. Tina Hodgson, 1236 Union Road, makes her Nanaimo squares for special occasions. "They are too rich for every day," she said. "And too fattening."

NANAIMO SQUARES

½ cup butter
5 tbs. white sugar
5 tbs. cocoa
1 tsp. vanilla
1 egg unbeaten
2 cups Graham wafer crumbs
1 cup coconut
½ cup chopped walnuts

Place softened butter, sugar, cocoa, vanilla and unbeaten egg in a bowl. Set bowl in a pan of hot water. Stir until butter melts and mixture has the constituency of custard.

Mix wafer crumbs, coconut and nuts together and add to cocoa mixture. Mix well and pat into an ungreased 9-inch square pan. Spread with topping.

TOPPING

4 tbs. butter, creamed
3 tbs. milk
2 tbs. of vanilla custard powder
2 cups icing sugar

Mix topping ingredients well and spread over chocolate base. Set in refrigerator to harden. When hardened cover evenly with a mixture of 4 squares of melted semi-sweet chocolate mixed with 1 tbs. melted butter.

Place in refrigerator to harden. Cut into squares when set.

Other Victoria area winners are: Mrs. S. A. Farebrother, 440 Simcoe Street; Mrs. F. W. Cannon, 562 Simcoe Street; Miss Sharon Thurber, 3118 West Downe Road; Mrs. Patricia Goertzen, 2724 Wales Road; Mrs. Heather Shepherd, 27 Pilot Street; Mrs. Dorothy Godson, 2202 Harbor Road, Sidney; Mrs. Agnes Fulton, — 86 Howe Street, and Mrs. S. T. Cameron-Merritt, Sidney.

Contact a Clinic

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a woman who was concerned about a 14-year-old girl who wanted the pill.

I agree with your advice that the girl obviously needed some counselling. However, I can't believe that you have not been informed about family planning clinics or Planned Parenthood, who offer help to any person of childbearing age without requiring legal residence or discriminating as to race, religion, national origin, maternity, or martial status. Services are given free to those who cannot pay.

In the future, please urge your readers with questions about the pill or other contraceptives to contact their local family planning clinic for the professional help they need, whether it be counselling or supplies.

If more persons would use these facilities available to them, there would be more planned babies with a welcome place in this world and less unwanted babies with small chances for a happy future. — Steady Reader

DEAR READER : And I can't believe that a "steady reader" has not noticed my frequent references to planned parenthood and family planning clinics. I mention them so often, I've been accused of being on their payroll!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had a strange experience the other evening.

We went back to the little town where we used to live because some old friends had invited us to spend Friday and Saturday with them there. On the way to these friends (we were a little early) we made a stop at the home of another couple we had known. They seemed glad to see us and asked to stop for Sunday supper and spend the evening with them.

We stopped back and when we went to their house both their cars were in the garage and lights were on in the house, but the shades were drawn. We rang the bell and knocked on the front door. but we couldn't raise anybody. When we went around to the back door, there was a big sucker sticking in the latch!

We left without delay. Now what do you think of that? — Stunned

DEAR STUNNED: Unbelievable!

Growing Role

It's a little over a month since the annual congress of business and professional women of the Americas was held in San Salvador.

Theme of the gathering was "The Growing Role of Women in a World of Rapid Change". It was discussed in four commissions—status of women, education for progress, economic and social development and perspective of youth.

Canada's representative at that congress was Beth Aulin, a Kamloops school teacher and president of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

A recent letter received from her speaks of what a "rewarding experience" it was to hear delegates and observers from many countries in the Americas, speak on the floor of the congress.

Then, later, to meet them and to exchange ideas at informal gatherings after each session.

"When I saw how far some of the countries have yet to go to attain what we in Canada and the United States now enjoy, I felt very humble," she writes.

Mrs. Aulin worked on all four commissions and became known to everyone as "Mees Canada".

During the first commission on the status of women, she pointed out that one clear indication of progress in Canada could be found in status of women action groups working at the national level, as well as at the provincial level, to ensure full implementation of recommendations in the report of Canada's royal commission on the status of women.

Women an Obstacle

CFBPWC and its provincial organizations, she explained, are working in conjunction with members of these action groups.

Main obstacle to progress still centres around Canadaian women themselves, Mrs. Aulin told the congress.

"They accept secondary roles in our society since they are conditioned from early childhood to see themselves as mothers and homemakers first, and as career-oriented persons second."

In the second commission on education for progress, Canada's representative built her presentation around a basic problem for women in Canada. She described it as "to erase from the public mind the assumption that women are capable of certain predictable levels of achievement and that their temperments are better suited to supportive positions rather than to leadership roles."

Women in Canada are thoroughly conditioned to feel uncomfortable if they aspire to stations other than those which "keep women in their place", she said.

Again, during the economic and social development commission, Mrs. Aulin stressed that Canadian women must change their own self-image and be ready to compete with men for positions of authority.

Aggressive action is required, she said, to combat ingrained attitudes concerning the potential of women for it is apparent that few women will attain to intermediate and senior levels of power until there are more women in top management positions.

Firms Surveyed

To substantiate those statements she told the congress of an examination of the composition, by sex, of boards of corporations and executives of 55 large firms in Canada. It revealed an almost complete absence of women.

It showed women held less than one per cent of the top corporate positions in Canada. Also that the shortage of women is most marked in fields of finance, mining and utilities, less so in building supplies, printing and publishing, furnishings and household goods.

In the fouth and last commission on the perspective of youth, "Mees Canada" explained that within this age group there is a trend toward broadening the scope of employment available. And less stress is placed on sex typing of job opportunities.

Young men are working as nurses, cooks, beauticians and as car-hops at food outlets.

She predicted that day care centres in the future will give all Canadian children of working mothers security and living protection while their mothers continue with their careers.

This will provide women with the assurance that they can raise well-adjusted children and at the same time continue to satisfy their own professional committments.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Saturday, December 9, 1972

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis now is on romance, pleasure, fulfillment of hopes and wishes. Pressure is removed. You can enjoy yourself. Leave details to others. Look around; survey situation. You are rewarded for recent efforts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Move ahead in area of career, personal ambitions. But also remember promises to family members. Strive for balance. Be diplomatic, especially in dealings with Libra. Room will be made for you at elevated position.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect now coincides with special communication, gain through writing, publishing. Don't hurry at expense of quality. See in light of reality. Pisces person could play key role.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Relationships are intensified. Nothing now is apt to be halfway — it is all or nothing. Money handled by associate is in good hands. But you will require an accounting. Know it and act accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on marriage and business partner. Legal affairs dominate. Tie loose ends. Complete project. Be a keen observer. Let others show their hands. You learn valuable lessons if patient. Pacing will be of utmost importance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New contract proves beneficial. Work procedures improve. Streamline methods. Stop hanging on to past. Future can be bright if you are a self-startrr. Leo plays key role. One who serves you proves loyalty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect now indicates activity in connection with creative endeavor. Relationship with member of opposite sex becomes meaningful. You seem able to be at right place at right time. Sense of adventure is heightened.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Entertain at home. Stick close to what is familiar. Deal with Sagittarian. You receive offer which can be profitable. Be receptive. Maintain balance and humor. But insist on receiving fair price.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Experiment with ideas. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Means test, probe — ask questions and obtain answers. Short trip is on agenda. Relative in transit could make special request.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent is on payment, collection. You can add to possessions. Key is to know what it is you really desire. Separate needs from mere whims. Be aware of budget requirements. Change is essential and Virgo, Gemini persons are involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is such that you gain renewed confidence. Make fresh start, especially in domestic area. Let the past go — grab opportunity for future. Your life can be more fulfilling if you make peace at home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Discretion now is necessary. Don't tell all you know. Be mature enough to know what to confide, what to hold in confidence. Apples especially in dealing with loved one. Another Pisces may be in picture.

If today is your birthday you draw people to you with their problems. Many take from you without giving anything in return. You have an understanding of foreign lands, of language, of law and history. In 1973, you will be happier, will travel and March could be a most significant month.

POLLUTION PROBES DETAILED

OTTAWA (CP) — An inventory of research into pollution problems in Canada has been published by the environmental secretariat of the National Research Council.

The 270-page volume lists the projects now being undertaken and provides the names of 700 experts involved.

John Marier of the secretariat said users will be able to check the index to learn, for example, what projects are going on into mercury pollution. The volume lists 37.

Because the volume is not complete, a second book will be published.

The first volume is available through the council's publications department. Cost is $6.50.

Nixon Sends MD To Marcos' Wife

MANILA (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos announced today that President Nixon is sending a surgeon from California to help repair the damage done to his wife Imelda in a knife attack.

Marcos said Dr. Robert T. Chase of the Sanford Medical Centre was expected at the weekend to help with surgery to connect tendons severed in the right hand of Mrs. Marcos. Nixon telephoned Marcos after the attack Thursday, and Marcos accepted his offer of help.

A still-unidentified man slashed the president's 43-year-old wife four times on the hands and arms with a bolo knife during an awards ceremony at an amusement park. Guards shot and killed the man.

The only clue to the assailant's identity was a label showing his jacket had been made in Davao City, 610 miles southeast of Manila. The tailor was being brought to Manila.

Marcos said the doctors told him his wife would regain use of her right arm and hand.

"When we undertook our program of reform, we knew we would have to pay a price," he said. "I cannot forgive myself it had to be her to pay such a price."

Marcos proclaimed martial law in September, saying he was beginning a "revolution to democratize wealth and property" and to restore "peace and order."

He attended a mass of thanksgiving for his wife's survival.

Crush Plants Eyed

CALGARY (CP) — Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner says he would like to see five new rapeseed crushing plants built in Alberta during the next 10 years.

Two of the plants should be built in the Peace River country, he told the annual meeting of the Alberta Wheat Pool Tuesday.

A great deal of rapeseed has been grown in the area but farmers faced high trucking costs to get the seed to Lethbridge, site of the province's only crushing plant.

'Insiders' Probed

SURREY (CP) — RCMP are investigating reports that a leak in the municipality of Surrey's planning department may have given land speculators inside information on land zone changes and development plans.

Mayor William Vander Zalm said Thursday he had no details on the extent of the investigation, but said RCMP have been searching for the past six months for a link between aldermen, planners and several reputed land speculators.

"The RCMP are following up rumors that certain parties were getting information that others were not getting and that the general public had no knowledge of," Vander Zalm said. An RCMP spokesman said the Mounties received a tip from Vancouver police about "certain involvements" in the municipality.

Disqualified

VANCOUVER (CP) — James Patrick Atkins, an independent parks board candidate whose name appears on the ballot for the Dec. 13 civic election, is ineligible to run for the office.

Atkins has an unresolved bankruptcy and under a Vancouver city charter disqualification provision, he is not eligible to run for public office.

Discharged

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Ron Pilling, former secretary of the B.C. Cattlemen's Association here, was given an absolute discharge after a preliminary hearing on a charge of theft over $200. Judge Eric Bendrodt said the Crown did not prove that Pilling had fraudulently failed to account for money reported missing after an audit of association books.

Morally Wrong

NELSON (CP) — Charles Edward Roberts accused the Crown of being morally wrong Thursday night after he was convicted in British Columbia Supreme Court of non-capital murder in the beating death of his wife Marie on Oct.29, 1967, at Grand Forks.

He was sentenced by Mr. Justice G. G. Rae to life imprisonment.

Speaking to the court after being convicted, Roberts said two assault charges which he laid against his wife were never rescinded but the RCMP did not pursue them. "If they had this never would have happened."

Arson

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mackie Goldin, 45, was committed Thursday for higher court trial on arson charges. The Crown alleges he set fire to cartons of perfume base Sept. 27, causing $3,000 damage and loss of $55,000 worth of perfume base.

Firm Fined

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Merrill and Wagner Ltd. of Williams Lake has been fined $250 plus $200 costs after pleading guilty in provincial court to infractions of slash burning regulations. The fires spread over about 25 acres including some immature timber.

Open Heart Surgery

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shaughnessy Hospital's first open-heart operation was performed successfully this week, Health minister Dennis Cocke said Thursday.

Doctors in B.C. will perform 30 to 32 of the operations a week. Shaughnessy will work up to about four a week.

Reward

TRAIL (CP) — A $50 reward has been offered by the Trail Wildlife Association for information leading to conviction of anyone illegally killing big game animals in the West Kootenay. The offer follows complaints that some hunters had killed elk brought to the area in a relocation effort.

WISE GUY MAKES (PINK) SLIP

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — Larry Place, 17, of Pembroke reported his car stolen and had a friend drive it over a bank in the hope of collecting insurance.

The 1964 vehicle landed upside down in the bottom of a 35-foot pit and was wrecked. Then Place found that his insurance had expired.

He pleaded guilty in court Thursday to a charge of mischief and two charges of theft. Judge A. A. McLean sentenced him to 40 days in jail.

Preventive Measures For Future Cold Spells

Casualties from the frost and bitter winds of the past week cannot yet be properly assessed, so the home gardener will do better to concentrate on preventive measures against future weather onslaughts.

Professional gardeners such as city parksmen and experienced nurserymen are perhaps better able to decide the extent of damage, if any, since their plants will have gone into the cold spell in the best possible condition.

Even herbaceous plants like the wallflowers, pansies and the English-daisies used as bedding plants here to bloom in early spring will likely survive the winter weather in the city parks and planter urns. They were in the ideal stage of growth when planted, well bushed out and exposing very little except leaves to the elements.

Even though your wallflowers are now a bit floppy, and the anemones lying flat, don't destroy them. Give them a chance to recover when milder, moister air returns. They may be suffering from dehydration only.

Of particular concern to home owners should be evergreen shrubs planted during the past six months, especially those near foundation walls or concrete of any sort or in any location.

Too often the choicest shrubs of the whole property are put into beds of soil on either side of the front entrance. Unless this soil was converted into a humusy, fertile growing mixture before planting, you will not succeed in raising the lovely camellias, rhododendrons and other fine evergreens you have spent good money to buy.

Shrubs put into these beds recently may have received no soil moisture whatever since being planted. The wind, and low humidity, plus frozen soil have combined to deprive them of the moisture necessary to keep the roots alive for they are never quite dormant.

You will notice leaves which droop unnaturally. Some gardeners have asked whether their rhododendrons are already dead when they see this happening. No: some varieties droop at any coolness even in summer, and from a temporary short spell of dryness during the full growing season. Others withstand these conditions better because their ancestors came from comparable conditions in the high mountains of China of similar habitats. Indeed a mild winter here on the coast with normal rainfall may cause more casualties than the frosts so far this winter. They are not record lows.

However, if the soil around any shrub is found to be dry when the frost leaves it, give a good slow drink of water. Not a thorough soaking such as is done in early summer but a moderate amount.

This is normal procedure for the dry spots near house walls where wide eaves protest the soil below from winter rains. Dust dry soil is often the cause of foundation plants failing to survive the early spring season.

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal features the "unusual" two-notrump overcall, which is a method of showing two-suited minor-suit hands in competitive situations. This convention was devised in 1948 by Alvin Roth. It is a bid which is used in duplicate bridge, since it is made on "bad" hands, and can turn out to be costly in rubber bridge.

♠ 9 6 2
♡ A K Q 9 7 5 2

WEST
♡ J 10 8
◇ Q 10 4 3 2
♣ Q 10 9 6 3

EAST
◇ A 8 6 5

SOUTH
♠ A K Q J 10 8 5 3
◇ K J 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 NT	3 ♡	5 ♣
Pass	Pass	6 ♣	6 ◇
6 ♠	7 ♣	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

West's "unusual" two-notrump overcall guaranteed a minimum of five diamonds and five clubs. Technically, it also guaranteed a little more highcard strength in the minor suits (8-10 high-card points), but in view of the favorable vulnerability, West felt justified in his deviation.

Over North's three-heart response, East co-operated nicely with West by jumping to five clubs. South, knowing from North's voluntary response at the three level that North had a good hand, made a nice bid when he passed. He was certain that the North-South hands contained a slam. And by his pass he hoped to denote weakness, thus deterring his non-vulnerable opponents from taking a sacrifice. He knew also that North, having made a free bid at the three level, wouldn't pass: he would either bid or double.

After North had cue-bid clubs, East's six-diamond bid was a lead-directing call, in case South purchased the contract. As he made the bid, he knew that he was on safe ground, since West's unusual two-notrump bid guaranteed at least five diamonds.

After South then stepped in with a six-spade bid, West, undaunted, took the sacrifice at seven clubs. At the conclusion of play, East had gone down five tricks, doubled, for a loss of 900 points.

When the deal was replayed, the East-West pair did not have the "unusual" two-notrump overcall included in their system of bidding. Thus, neither of them entered into the auction; and North-South, encountering no obnoxious interference, had no difficulty in arriving at a small-slam contract in spades. This was fulfilled with an overtrick when West elected to lead a club.

And so the second North-South pair scored 1460 points, while their East-West teammates lost "only" 900 points. Their profit on the deal was 560 points, while their East-West teammates lost "only" 900 points. Their profit on the deal was 560 points, which was worth 11 I.M.P.'s (International Match Points).

2 More Yugoslav Seamen Seek Asylum

VANCOUVER — Two Yugoslav seamen, Vasilije Tomasic, 25, and Yorko Protic, 19, have surrendered to immigration authorities seeking political asylum in Canada. Last week two other Yugoslavs, Farne Jaram, 26, and Jose Govic, 21, also deserted their ships and surrendered to immigration authorities.

All four have said they feared imprisonment in Yugoslavia for their political beliefs.

DEDHAM, Mass. — The husband of a $1 million winner in the Massachusetts state lottery is among seven persons charged with the theft of at least $100,000 worth of auto parts.

Norfolk County District Attorney George Burke said that the parts stolen from a General Motors warehouse in Westwood, Mass., ranged from ignition points to complete engines and were sold to other auto parts distributors.

One of those charged with larceny was Charles Sullivan of Brockton. His wife, Helene, 32, a telephone company secretary, won the million dollar drawing Nov. 6.

Sullivan said at that time he expected to keep his $185-a-week job with GMC.

QUINCY, Mass. — Twenty members of the Quincy Taxpayers Revolt attended a city council meeting at which salary hikes of at least 100 per cent for the mayor and council members were approved. "None of them knew that the council voted for a pay raise," Timothy Cardwell, president of the organization said.

The council approved increasing Mayor Walter Hannon's annual salary from $10,000 to $25,000. Council salaries were doubled from $1,500 to $3,000.

"We were just sitting right there when it happened, and if that wasn't asleep at the switch, I don't know what is," Cardwell said.

PARIS — Australian journalist Wilfred Burchett says the new Labor government had returned his passport 17 years after it had been taken away from him. Australian officials refused to issue him a new one in 1955 because he went to North Korea to cover the Communist side of the Korean war. "I am interested to see that the new prime minister is living up to his pledges on the first day," Burchett said.

Dan Brennan, executive vice-president of the Warner Bros. Jungle Habitat, said Paar was bitten on the right wrist after he "playfully" picked up a six-month-old tiger to pet it. The wound required five stitches.

SANTIAGO, Chile — Victor Hugo Cabellos, 21, tried to advertise a skydiving contest by dangling from a 12-storey building across the street from the presidential palace.

He succeeded.

He attracted thousands of spectators, five fire engines, three police cars and a riot squad. He also snarled downtown traffic for miles and wound up in jail on disorderly conduct charges.

DALLAS — Rev. F. Sterling Cary of New York has become the first black president of the National Council of Churches.

Vandals Hit Church

CALGARY (CP) — Vandals caused about $400 damage to the Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran church early this week and drank two bottles of communion wine.

The empty bottles were found on the floor by the pastor who said nothing else was taken.

But the contents of two fire extinguishers were sprayed on walls, cupboards had been broken into, items such as a film projector and a radio were smashed and art supplies were destroyed.

FISH LIFE RETURNS

First Officer Ernest Norrey, head of the scuba diving detail, says his divers are encountering fish for the first time

James Bay Central Issue of City Election

Long simmering in the background, occasionally fanned into a blaze of city council argument, the Bay Village affair has suddenly erupted into as hot a pre-election issue as the Reid Centre debate was last year.

In the process, it is focussing attention on one of Victoria's sorely neglected areas, James Bay, and its problems of encroachment by apartment sprawl, increasing density and traffic congestion.

FOURTH SECTION

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Whatever the outcome of the protracted dispute between developer J. A. Mace and the city, Mayor Peter Pollen has effectively turned it into the central issue of this civic election by delaying for up to 30 days council's decision last week to execute a long-delayed development contract with Mace.

One condition of the decision is that another public hearing be held on the question of a modifying agreement, to scale down the original proposal's 29-storey highrise to one of 24 storeys.

Another highrise controversy, on which some candidates are being asked where they stand, is the question whether Vancouver developer G. F. Mulek should be allowed to build a second tower as "twin" to his much-criticized highrise at View and Quadra.

Mulek, who received approval for the project from a previous city administration, wants a permit for the second tower and says only then will he be able to improve the general appearance of the site, which has been variously condemned as an eyesore and a monstrosity.

Complying with council's latest demand, he has now consolidated all the land involved but still a permit has not been issued. No legal action is yet in the offing, but conceivably it could be if council continues to delay.

Apart from matters involving the physical growth of the city, and the need to preserve Victoria's unique character and amenities, few real issues have emerged with the possible exception of the various plans announced from time to time for a convention-cultural centre.

A theme taken up lately by council is the possibility of developing a major mall area in the downtown core, with Douglas Street as one suggested location.

Most candidates would favor such improvements, but the various means of achieving them — including possible erosion of part of Beacon Hill Park — could prove controversial.

In the Victoria civic election, 10 candidates are contesting four vacant seats. They include three incumbents and several others who have tried previously for a seat on council.

A summary of their statements follows:

Malcolm Anderson, 38-year-old businessman, of 3965 Telegraph Bay Road, was unsuccessful Liberal candidate for Saanich and the Islands in the August provincial election and is running in a municipal election for the first time.

Declaring himself "solidly behind" Victoria's new planning policy limiting downtown highrise construction to 14 storeys, he also says he is against the Mace development, for the completion and tidying up of the Fort-Quadra highrise development and for the Reid Centre in its amended form.

Anderson says his major points of concern will start with his present activities — as a director of the Silver Threads Centre, the Greater Victoria Library Board and the Pacific Centre Foundation.

Sam Bawlf, 28, a building renovator, who lives at 624 Avalon in James Bay, says he is running for office for two reasons: a desire for greater citizen participation in determining local and over-all planning direction, and concern for protecting Victoria's unique character.

Bawlf, who has served as planning consultant to both private and public clients, has restored various old buildings and is now engaged on renovation of the Belmont Building. He is co-founder of the James Bay Community Association.

If elected, Bawlf says he will work for stable property taxes for homeowners; "successful planning dialogue between city hall and the neighborhoods, rather than frustrated confrontation"; protection of Victoria's heritage, including parks, waterfront and Old Town; and action to qualify Victorians for new federal grants and loans for housing and neighborhood rehabilitation.

Henry Bitterman, 52, real estate salesman, of 934 Selkirk, who is running for the second time in the city, says city councils have been and are losing money in several areas due to poor management. He cites the firemen's contract just approved as "another bungle" by council.

Bitterman says the Mace development should not be allowed in the area proposed. If James Bay residents want a (lowrise) shopping centre it should ge built in another location capable of handling traffic.

He believes all, and not just some, members of council should be on all council groups and commissions, such as the Advisory Planning commission.

Incumbent Tom Christie, 64, a retired school board official, of 74 Wellington Avenue, has served four years on council and is chairman of the finance committee.

He says he can foresee a 10-mill increase in the education and city mill rate unless "a more generous share of the broad taxing powers of the two senior levels of government is directed to the city coffers," and he will press for that.

Christie says he will also continue to press for regionalization of health services, which he initiated, for municipal control of the practice of converting apartments to condominiums and for controls on height and placement of highrise buildings.

"I will never condone the extension of Michigan Street through Beacon Hill Park."

Robert Ellis, 36, credit bureau operator, of 1521 Shasta Place, making his fourth election attempt in the city, believes the people of Victoria want aldermen who can represent them in the whole area of civic government.

"There has been a great deal of discussion of special problems, such as limiting highrises in James Bay, but while this is vitally important there are many other things requiring constant attention," he says.

These include police and fire protection, parks, maintenance, health and welfare, traffic and garbage collection.

Ellis believes deveoper Mace has "a pretty good case" for proceeding with his Bay Village scheme, and rather than face a law suit council should allow him to do so.

Incumbent Percy Frampton, 60, a businessman, who lives at 112 Montreal, is a council veteran with seven years' service. He is chairman of the traffic, public transportation and public works committee.

He pledges one of his priorities will be to work for the amalgamation of police, fire and ambulance services in Greater Victoria, "possibvly under control of the Capital Regional Board." Other projects Frampton says he will devote himself to: completion of the one-way street system pairing Government and Wharf, and Pandora and Johnson; initiation of a ring road system and a start on road works authorized by the five-year capital budget; completion of the Clover Point outfall; enlargement of the senior citizens' centre in Centennial Square; and "more realistic planning in community areas with the input of responsible community associations."

Joyce Heynsbroek, 43, a registered nurse, of 1448 Vining, who is making her second bid for a seat on council, was born in England, came to Canada in 1960 and is now a Canadian citizen.

Past-president of the Capital Region Tenants Association, she says she has been an active member of community groups all her life, and lists as her special areas of interest the Victoria Free Medical Clinic, Cool-Aid, education, drug abuse and care of the aged.

Mrs. Heynsbroek has no platform as such, but rather what she calls a "philosopsy" on civic affairs. "I desire to see Victoria a city for people, with public participation in all aspects of city affairs, which includes having council meetings in the evening."

Incumbent Alfred O. Hood, 60, a retired service officer, of 1710 Rockland, was successful in last January's by-election and says he is seeking re-election for a full two-year term to enable him to deal with seveal major projects now in progress.

These include setting up housing for low-income families and senior citizens in cooperation with the provincial government, as well as apartment development for families with children; completion and implementation of programs for James Bay and Victoria West to meet the needs of those communities; and protection from inflationary trends for seniors citizens and those on fixed incomes.

Hood, chairman of the housing and land development committee, says he also wants to see the establishment early next year of the city's Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau, which he initiated and steered through council.

Joseph Richards, 47, civil servant, of 801 Esquimalt Road, several times previously an aldermanic candidate in Victoria, is also seeking a seat on the Greater Victoria school board.

He says the eight-alderman council should be increased to 10, of whom eight should be members elected from the city's eight geographical outer areas, and two from the central area.

All public hearings onrezoning matters should be held in the evenings to allow the average tax-paying home owner to attend, Richards maintains.

He would like to see the city acquire as much land as possible around the Inner Harbor, and to expropriate the Reid Centre site on Wharf for "recreation and community use."

Margaret Richards, 66, of 1070 Moss, a member of the Victoria Planning Commission, is making her second attempt to become a city alderman.

If elected, she says she will work for an efficient sewage system for Greater Victoria, good city planning, proper consideration for the interests of senior citizens, young people and children, a vote for tenants on money referendums and "a one day a week open market for fresh produce."

BOAR hunt

At a farm about 100 miles northwest of Toronto, Walter Litz raises wild boars to be hunted down. The farm is enclosed by a four-foot fence that can't be jumped by the boars. In Weekend Magazine this Saturday, Robert Stall tells of his visit there and how the boars were shot down.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to thank my friends and neighbors for their many cards and acts of friendship and consolation during the recent bereavement in the death of my loving husband, Len. The kindness and attention my husband received while under the care of the nurses and staff of 4th Central, Royal Jubilee Hospital was inspirational. I also wish to thank the members of the Victoria Police Dept. for their kindness at the time of my husband's death. Special mention is also necessary to Dr. Perry and Ptak for their dedicated service during my husband's illness.
— Mary E. Pearce.

The family of the late Miss Lillian McIntyre wish to express their sincere thanks to her friends for their kindness and expressions of sympathy during her recent illness and passing. Special thanks to Rev. John Wood and Rev. George Harrington for their comforting words at the funeral service.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BROWN — In loving memory of my dear husband, Dad and Grampa Herbert Brown, who passed away December 8th, 1971.
The world may change from year to year
And friends from day to day
But never will the one we love
From memory pass away.
—Always in our hearts, Wife Florence and all the Family.

PATTERSON — In loving memory of Samuel, who passed away December 8, 1970.
The rolling stream of life rolls on,
But still the vacant chair
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile
Of the one who once sat there.
—Always remembered by sister and family.

Escalators Can Be Hazardous

Many people would do well to subscribe to the journal, Family Safety, put out by the U.S. National Safety Council. It is full of helpful articles on how to prevent home, traffic and recreational accidents.

In the summer, 1972, issue is an article entitled "What You Should Know About Escalators." It tells how people, especially children under 6 years of age, and adults 55 years or older, can be injured in escalator accidents. Although they are not frequent, and fewer than 1,000 accidents are reported each year, when they happen, they can be very serious.

Children can have fingers mangled and crushed or even torn off. One 5-year-old boy in Chicago fell on the down escalator in the subway station, and because his jacket sleeve got caught in the mechanism, he was dragged to the bottom of the escalator, and his left ear was severed and his right arm was mangled.

Usually, the accident happens because the child is playing and jumping on or off the escalator, and clothing—jacket sleeves, long clothes or shoes with rubber soles—can get pulled into the machinery. Generally, escalators have safety switches that automatically shut off the power when the're touched by something that is caught in the machinery. Some escalators have only two switches, while others have six or even 11 at intervals along the skirt guard.

One danger is that when a shot or boot sole is run along the bottom edge of the escalator, if the sole is made of plastic, it can become heated and can stretch enough to get caught. It is dangerous for a child to sit down on the steps of the escalator, or to put his hands on the step above him to balance himself. One of put his hands on the step above him to balance himself. One of the biggest problems that safety directors face in department stores is that parents sometimes take strollers and buggies on escalators, in spite of signs specifically prohibiting it, and this can be dangerous.

Obviously, the thing to do is to behold the child's hand and keep him away from the sides of the escalator, and to keep him from playing on the escalator, as if it were a toy. As the author of the article says, "The escalator is not a plaything. It is not a baby-sitter that entertains children while mother is trying on a dress."

Family Safety is published quarterly by the U.S. National Safety Council, 425 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

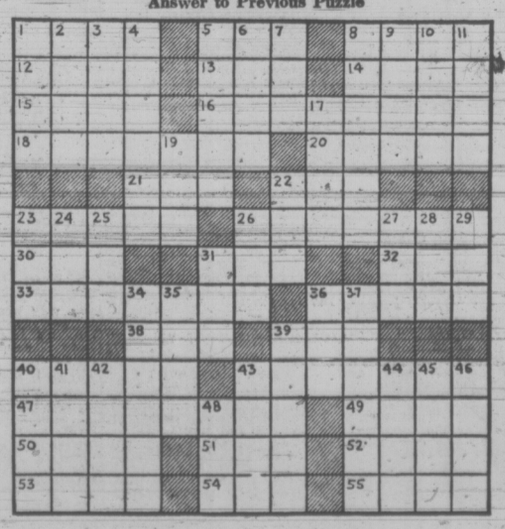
Answer to Previous Puzzle



VICTORIA TIMES, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1972 37

Ladies and Gentlemen

Will you please read below, very carefully, for a few minutes.

I know you have problems and worries, financially etc. to think about; but you must become fully interested in the business of how your City is being run, and how your tax dollar is being spent. Do not continue to be as ignorant, uninformed and careless, as you are now.

I know the usual things for a candidate to do are (whether for Alderman, MLA, or Federal); smile nice to everybody, use a picture in the newspaper taken a few years ago, do not make anybody dislike you; make absolutely sure you are a nice guy. Casting all these aside I simple intend to be myself; give you some facts; tell you why I am asking you to elect me as Alderman and let the chips fall where they may. I am sick and tired of watching councils and mayors come and go, and the city, because of them, getting into mess after mess; financially the books looking worse and worse; councils and mayors changing their minds as if they were changing their shirts, on things that mean Thousands and millions of dollars to you the taxpayer. Here are some of the reasons why I am running for Alderman.

1. Concerning the proposed Mace Development. Teenaged children would know that such a huge structure in that already congested area would be foolish to even think about; let alone seriously consider, as some of the present council have done.

Two aldermen presently running for office again should not be re-elected as they have repeatedly stated that we must not discourage developers. This of course you have read in the newspapers more than once. They voted for the development, as you have read about.

These streets: Simcoe, Croft, Niagara and Toronto are mere cow trails, meant for horse and buggy, and are finding it very difficult to cope with the present traffic; let alone even try and cope with the proposed bedlam that would follow if such a development was allowed. The people of James Bay (as all of us) must actually "aim" our cars past one another now as we slowly wend our way past one another, down these streets. These streets are only 21, 32, 31 and 20 feet wide. Yet, the above mentioned gentlemen voted to have this catastrophe happen. It would cost the city hundreds of thousands of dollars to expropriate properties, to widen roads, to accommodate the traffic to say the very least. These gentlemen are very concerned about the developers. I thought they were to be concerned about you people. Thousands and thousands of you.

2. Speaking about one of the above gentlemen. If my memory serves me correctly, I believe he was the gentleman largely responsible for the swimming pool being located at Central Park. This bad move whoever was responsible has subsequently cost the city an additional $194,534 for the purchase of parking space; not counting the loss of an additional $86,000 in one years operation of our swimming pools, (one year)! Where will this end up?

3. Here are some more figures of loss. In the past 3 years alone we have lost (the city) by poor management of councils and mayors:

(A) The Memorial Arena — $238,869.00.

(B) The Crystal Gardens — $320,000.00.

(C) The McPherson Playhouse — $127,274.00.

(D) The Athletic Park — $91,600.00.

$778,262.00 loss in 5 short years — on these items alone!

How many more could one dig up?

4. The city is overloaded with "departments" etc. which are absolutely unneessary, which need a "weeding out."

5. Pollution is everyones concern. Our councils in past and present encourage and contribute to pollution by allowing the worst kind of pollution to exist; in our city noisy and dangerous aircraft flying over our peaceful homes. Experts in the field of pollution, tell us noise pollution is the worst kind and most dangerous to humans. Legal action should have been taken against the ones who so have allowed this.

6. A large amount of money spent on the purchase of acreage at Smiths Hill. Most people don't even know where this is; and no parking available for them if and when they did find it.

7. When invited to the Reid Centre (Public Meeting) we were told by the chairman to be quiet, when we asked for the microphone to be used so we could hear what was being said. Told we would have to leave! if not quiet. Incredible? But true. Chairman? An alderman seeking re-election. This of course you have also read about.

Council made fools of decent people, that they represent. Decent people who were there sincerely and concerned. Councils as such should surely be elsewhere; anywhere but in our Council chambers. Again, the developer was not humiliated. The taxpayer was.

8. Only one member of council being on the planning department; and only one on the police commission. A ridiculous situation. All council members should be and have full say on all matters and departments concerning you people. We represent all of you on all things, not just a few.

9. City council in past months paid almost $1,000,000 (one million) for less than an acre of land; (with your money.) Incredible? But true. It's easy to raise one's hand when voting there. It's not their money.

10. If the present council, and the council and mayors of the past would run their personal businesses as they run yours on city council, they would definitely be bankrupt a long time ago. Why don't you, the taxpayer, keep a better control of the situation by better representation for one thing?

11. One of the most beautiful streets in Canada, Cook Street, between Fort and Beacon Hill Park, ruined forever. Where were your council and mayors of the past to stop this? Those beautiful Chestnut trees ripped apart by city workers as though some mad men had done this. Our most beautiful street of trees ruined forever. Incredible? But true.

12. The planning of the city, particularly James Bay has been a fiasco from the start. It needs a new complete look by some persons who know this city thoroughly and I most definitely do. My business forces me to know it, completely, (inside-out). Last time, some people completely green and new to our city were among the planners and leaders, and you see the results.

13. Did you know that the city owns a restaurant and leases it in operation and opposition to its own taxpayers? Incredible? But true. Strange? I agree with you.

14. Have you seen our city hall close up lately? Have you seen the pigeon manure all around the bottom, so much so the paint has disappeared in many places? A mess. How come our concerned council hasn't seen, and improved this? Beautiful Victoria!

15. This latest council expenditure. Council and mayor giving the firemen a raise! I would definitely be against this. But again, it's not the mayor's or aldermen's money. Did you know they received two raises in the past year? Did you know they get their uniforms paid for? Perhaps this is another of the city's operation (in loss) that it could consider to sell and let a private company look after our fire protection. (Something to look into?) Could be.

16. People fixing up their houses and beautifying them get an increase in taxes now! I would propose a scheme of encouragement for such. A tax reduction on a percentage basis for few years after beautifying, to encourage a more beautiful city.

So much more to be said, but costs so much money to say it. I have no group, club, or organization behind me as some other candidates seem to have. I ask for your vote. Let me prove myself, you can always vote me out if I don't produce! I would do much more digging for you and come up finally with a reduction; which is long overdue.

PLEASE VOTE
H. BITTERMAN

A MERRY CHRISTMAS RECIPE
Imagine, on Christmas Day, Mom busy in the spacious kitchen, checking the turkey and ham cooking in the two separate built-in ovens. The dining room table is already set for 16 people, and granny is playing your grand piano in the livingroom, while dad is sitting in front of the roaring fireplace, gazing outside at the serenity of the snow glistening on the towering trees. All is peaceful, because downstairs the children are playing in front of the massive stone fireplace in the super-deluxe recreation room. Take these ingredients and add three bathrooms, five bedrooms and a close in prestige location with a country setting and the result is a Merry Christmas.

$5,750 Tree Not for Sale

PARIS, Ont. (CP) — William H. Wells has refused to accept $5,750 to give up the pleasure of contemplating the 250-year-old black walnut tree in his backyard.

In Ontario's first hardwood tree auction, a United States buyer ran the price up to that figure Thursday but Mr. Wells turned down the bid at the sale held under the big tree. His wife and daughter Carol were happy.

"We get a great deal of pleasure out of looking out on that tree and the birds and squirrels in it," Mrs. Wells said later. "We love it so much that to part with it we'd have to ask a price that's almost ridiculous."

Mr. Wells, who works in the federal revenue department's office at Kitchener, Ont., said the tree—57 inches in diameter at the base—has a minimum sale value of $12,000 and possibly $15,000 for use in making veneer sheets.

Experts estimated it would produce about 100,000 square feet of veneer between 1-30 and 1-64 thick with an ultimate value that could run to $50,000 or more.

"There's enough veneer in it to cover every stereo set in Ontario and most of those in Quebec as well," Mr. Wells said.

HELD THREE AUCTIONS

The auction, one of three staged Thursday under supervision of the Ontario resources department for the protection of sellers, brought eager buyers from New York state, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Quebec and Ontario in search of the valuable and relatively scarce timber.

Gary Patterson of Lewiston, N.Y., was the higher bidder for Mr. Wells' tree and also was the successful purchaser —at $5,050—of one owned by Bev Finch at Belmont in Elgin County.

A third tree—a smaller one on Mr. Wells' land in this community near Brantford—drew a bid of only $500 and was not sold.

The bidding for Mr. Wells' 150-foot tree was largely confined to Mr. Patterson and an unidentified buyer. It started at $5,000.

Mr. Wells said later he also had received cables showing interest by prospective buyers in Japan and Frankfurt, Germany. The Japanese inquirer had asked that the auction be held off until Dec. 20.

"We possibly may hear something from there later," he said.

Woman to Stand Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal woman who claimed she worked for the LeDain commission on the non-medical use of drugs was sent to trial Thursday on a charge of possession of drugs for the purpose of trafficking.

Police testified at a preliminary hearing that Lucille Barach had picked up a package containing a pound of hashish at Montreal International Airport June 1.

They also said the woman had shown them a letter which said she worked for the LeDain commission.

Police also said they discovered 19 grams of the hallucinogen LSD during a search of her apartment.

U.S. Critics Pan Singer From B.C.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian bass-baritone Donald Bell, a veteran soloist with an international reputation, was roughly handled by Washington critics for his work in a production of Handel's Messiah at the Kennedy Centre for the Performing Arts.

Paul Hume of the Washington Post, a dean of American music critics, said the 38-year-old Bell, "regardless of his credentials, just did not sound like a very good singer."

"His voice moves easily but his diction is so weird and his tone so uneven that his reputation apparently exceeds his abilities."

Lawrence Sears in The Star-News said Bell "was curiously miscast," adding: "Though he sang carefully and very well, his quality was simply too unfocused for baroque music in English."

Bell, a native of South Burnaby, has spent much of his career in Europe although he has returned frequently to Canada. He is currently with the opera company of Basel, Switzerland.

Funny Money Reduces Counterfeiting

MONTREAL (CP) — The number of counterfeit bills being produced in Canada has been reduced since 1969 when the Bank of Canada changed the design for $10 and $20 bills, a spokesman for the RCMP said.

In 1962, police seized $1,419,058 in counterfeit bills compared with $1,215,900 in 1968, $819,335 in 1970 and $266,959 in 1971.

Speaking at a news conference after a meeting of Canadian and American police officers here to discuss counterfeiting, the spokesman said professional con men seem to prefer using counterfeit cheques or credit cards rather than money.

Private Developer's Plan For Ice Arena Considered

Prospect of new government grants for capital recreation projects has made municipally-owned arena facilities in Saanich a more attractive alternative, says acting mayor Ald. Leslie Passmore.

But Passmore, chairman of indoor recreation committee, said Thursday consideration is still being given to a private developer's offer to outline a proposal for its own skating complex.

Passmore, one of five aldermen who favored placing an arena borrowing bylaw before ratepayers at the earliest opportunity, said the alternatives include a wholly private operation and a combination of private and public facilities.

Columbian 4-Rinks Ltd., a Burnaby company completing the largest indoor hockey rink complex in the world, is awaiting a reply from Saanich after holding two informal discussions with members of the council, including Mayor Hugh Curtis.

It is the company's position that Saanich must make a decision on how to proceed toward more ice facilities in the municipality, and if it is decided to make use of the private firm there should be some indication of what land would be available.

Columbian, which has done a preliminary survey of Greater Victoria recreation needs, suggests a site covering about eight acres would be suitable for the type of development which could meet public needs in the capital region.

The company suggests that instead of a cluster of rinks as in its Burnaby development, it could consider ice surfaces plus squash courts, tennis and a health club, for example.

"We're interested in going anywhere if a compatible arrangement can be made," said Allan Harris, a vice-president of Columbian. But before a firm proposal can be made there must be "a platform to work from," he said.

"It is up to the municipalities (Greater Victoria) to decide what they want," Harris said. "They are aware of what we are doing and what we can do."

The ice shortage on Vancouver Island is "critical," Harris said, not just in Victoria but up-Island as well. Columbian has made no other approach to a Greater Victoria municipality, but does not confine its interest to Saanich.

Last week Premier Dave Barrett said the provincial government will pay one-third of the cost of municipal capital recreation development costs for projects valued under $1 million. He has not spelled out details of the offer.

MINERAL ACT EYED

Mines Minister Leo Nimsick said Thursday a study will be made of the Mineral Act to determine what can be done to protect regional parks from mineral claim staking.

"I haven't looked into the matter yet," he said. "But it seems to me that some parks should be protected from mineral claims."

He was commenting on a capital regional parks committee recommendation requesting the provincial gold commission remove those Class C parks transferred to regional districts from the land open to mineral claim staking.

Clyde Savage, chairman of the parks committee, said the present situation is ludicrous.

He cited as an example Helmcken Park which was transferred by the former provincial government to the regional district.

"While it was under provincial jurisdiction it was protected from mineral claim staking," he said. "But once it was transferred it was open to mineral claims because there is nothing in the Act protecting regional parks from mining operations."

The former government was strongly criticized by the board for allowing mineral claim staking in East Sooke Park.

MOVIES

Saturday

The Glass Menagerie (xxxx), on 5 at 4. Fine performances highlight this excellent adaptation of the Tennessee Williams play about the trapped, dreamlike existence of a St. Louis family. Starring in this 1950 drama are Jane Wyman, Kirk Douglas and Gertrude Lawrence.

Sea Wife (xx), on 7 at 6:30. Richard Burton and Joan Collins star in this 1957 drama about four survivors of a torpedoed boat and their struggle for survival in an island paradise.

Maya (xx), on 12 at 7:30. Elephants and on-location photography highlight this 1966 adventure set in India and starring Jay North and Clint Walker.

Panic in the Streets (xxx), on 13 at 7:30. A tense drama about the fear that grips the city of New Orleans when a dead body is found to be carrying the plague. This 1950 movie boasts an all-star cast including Richard Widmark, Paul Douglas and Barbara Bel Geddes.

Strangers When We Meet (xx), on 6 at 8. Pure soap opera best describes this 1960 drama about a successful married architect involved in an affair with a married neighbour. Kirk Douglas and Kim Novak star.

None But the Brave (xx), on 2 at 9. Frank Sinatra directed and stars in this Second World War drama about U.S. marines battling the Japanese on a South Pacific island.

Love is a Ball (xx), on 5 at 9. Glenn Ford, Hope Lange and Charles Boyer star in this 1963 comedy about a bachelor who gets involved with a suave matchmaker on the French Riviera.

Fireball Forward (xx), on 8 at 9. Combat footage from the movie Patton highlights this TV-movie starring Ben Gazzara as a Second World War general ordered to shape-up a hard-luck division.

American Guerrilla in the Philippines (xx), on 11 at 9. Tyrone Power stars in this Second World War adventure filmed on-location in the Philippines.

The Lost Moment (xxx), on 13 at 10:30. An engrossing 1947 drama about a young American publisher who finds that love letters he has been seeking in Venice cause near-tragedy. This movie is taken from the Henry James novel and stars Robert Cummings, Susan Hayward and Agnes Moorehead.

Homecoming (xx), on 7 at 11. Clark Gable, Lana Turner and Anne Baxter star in this 1948 drama about a self-centered surgeon who enlists in the army when war breaks out and finds his sense of values changing.

Panic in the Streets (xxx), on 12 at 11. (See earlier for details of this excellent movie.)

The Amorous Adventures of Moll Flanders (xxx), on 5 at 11:30. Kim Novak stars in this 1965 movie adaptation of Daniel Defoe's classic tale about a gorgeous 18th-century female who stops at nothing to achieve money and social position.

Fireball Forward (xx), on 6 at 11:30. (See earlier this evening for details.)

A Shot in the Dark (xxx), on 8 at 11:30. Free-wheeling, often hysterically funny farce starring Peter Sellers as the bumbling French inspector he created in the film, The Pink Panther.

Crash Dive (xx), on 4 at 11:45. The Second World War and romance highlights this 1943 drama starring Tyrone Power, Dana Andrews and Anne Baxter.

I Was a Male War Bride (xxx), on 2 at 12:10. Cary Grant and Ann Sheridan star in this delightful comedy about the complicated courtship of a French captain and a WAC lieutenant.

MOVIES

Sunday

The Agony and the Ecstasy (xx), on 7 at 9:30. This 1965 drama describes the conflict between Pope Julius II (Rex Harrison) and Michelangelo (Charlton Heston) over painting the Sistine Chapel.

The 5,000 Fingers of Dr. T (xxxx), on 13 at 10:15. Superb fantasy about a young boy who hates his piano teacher and dreams of being held captive, together with 500 other boys, in a large castle. Fun for adults as well as children.

The Saracen Blade (xx), on 13 at noon. Taken from the Frank Yerby novel, this 1954 adventure stars Ricardo Montalban and Betta St. John.

Miss Sadie Thompson (xxx), on 13 at 2. Rita Hayworth stars in this 1953 movie version of the Somerset Maugham tale of tropical sex and salvation.

Bell, Book and Candle (xxx), on 13 at 3:40. James Stewart and Kim Novak star in this 1958 movie version of the comedy stage hit about a publisher who moves into a flat above a curio shop run by two witches.

Flame of Barbary Coast (xx), on 11 at 4. A 1945 John Wayne western-adventure.

Boeing, Boeing (xx), on 11 at 6. A silly comedy about a playboy in Paris trying to keep his three fiances, all airline hostesses, from meeting. Cast includes Tony Curtis and Jerry Lewis.

Three Sisters (xxxx), on 13 at 7:30. Kim Stanley, Geraldine Page, Sandy Dennis and Shelley Winters star in this 1966 movie version of the Anton Chekhov classic about three young women living in turn-of-the-century Russia.

The World of Suzie Wong (xx), on 4 at 9. An unpleasant and somewhat tasteless drama of an American artist and his love for a girl of the streets of Hong Kong. Cast includes William Holden and Nancy Kwan.

Saratoga Trunk (xxx), on 12 at 9. Edna Ferber's romantic tale of the conflict between a Texas cowboy and a beautiful hussy who tries to wed for wealth and revenge is brought to the screen with excellent performances by Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman and Flora Robson — vintage 1945.

A Shot in the Dark (xxx), on 6 at 11:15. (See Saturday evening for details of this excellent comedy.)

The Burning Hills (x), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. Natalie Wood and Tab Hunter play young lovers pursued by outlaws in this 1956 western drama.

Arise My Love (xx), on 2 at 11:40. A confused mixture of love and war starring Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland filmed in 1940.

Sombrero (xx), on 4 at midnight. This 1952 drama tells of the romantic adventures of three Mexican bachelors and stars Ricardo Montalban and Pier Angeli.

Monday

A Bullet is Waiting (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. After a plane carrying a sheriff and his prisoner crashes, the two men take shelter in a cabin belonging to a professor and his daughter. This 1954 drama stars Rory Calhoun and Jean Simmons.

No Way Out (xxx), on 7 at 4. Gripping drama about a Negro-hating, cop-hating hoodlum who incites a race riot and almost ruins a Black intern's chances of becoming a doctor. This 1950 drama offers excellent performances by Richard Widmark, Linda Darnell and Sidney Poitier.

The Eddy Duchin Story (xxx), on 13 at 7:30. Tyrone Power, Kim Novak and Victoria Shaw star in this 1956 dramatization of the life of pianist Eddy Duchin and his two loves — set in New York in the thirties.

A Shot in the Dark (xxx), on 5 at 9. Free-wheeling often hysterically funny farce starring Peter Sellers as the bumbling French Inspector Clouseau — a role he created in the film, The Pink Panther.

Taras Bulba (xx), on 4 at 10:30. In the 16th century, Cossack chieftan Taras Bulba prepares his sons for the war between the Cossacks and the Poles. Starring in this 1962 adventure are Yul Brynner, Tony Curtis and Christine Kaufman.

Macao (xx), on 2 at 11:50. A familiar melodrama that has Robert Mitchum playing an adventurer aiding the police in capturing an underworld kingpin wanted in the States. Supporting cast in this 1952 movie includes Jane Russell and William Bendix.

Series on Women

Women—discussed, defined, defended, described by age-old tradition and by today's woman—on CBC-FM's Ideas series, begins on Monday, December 11 for four weeks. Programs are on weekdays at 10:03 p.m. (except December 25 when there is no show), and the series consists of 19 programs.

In their book The Lace Ghetto, authors Maxine Nunes and Deanna White aptly describe the situation which inspired this series. "Many of the great male writers and philosophers of our culture, whose task it is to interpret the human condition, have taken it upon themselves to define woman. But woman herself has not yet succeeded in defining her own identity. Even in this relatively enlightened century, the human condition continues to be considered as something quite apart from the female condition."

This Ideas series offers women an opportunity to define their lives, and identify their places in society today, as well as in historical perspective.

About 200 years ago the spirit of rebellion, revolution, change and independence shook large areas of the western civilization, and it was at this time that women publicly began to question the validity of the assumptions on which their lives were based. In 1972 many women no longer believe the centuries-old descriptions and definitions of "woman", and are looking for a new understanding of their roles in society.

Programs in the series touch upon all phases of a woman's life, from adolescence through motherhood and aging. There are documentaries on women of other centuries and cultures, present women's movements, and well-known individual women. The ways in which men view and treat women are also the subjects for programs in the series.

Profile of Grey Owl

In the early 1930s, long before such terms as Ecology and Conservation had gained popularity, there arose from the Canadian north a lone voice, crying out for the preservation of the beaver and the cessation of killing wild animals purely for sport. Almost overnight, in Europe and America, Grey Owl — author, naturalist, pioneer conservationist, and Canadian Indian — became a public sensation, as millions rallied to his one-man crusade.

A strange, enigmatic personality, Grey Owl used his great attraction and wildly flamboyant ways to draw international support to his goals. He corresponded regularly with Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King and other notables, lectured to thousands in Canada and during two tours in England, and at Buckingham Palace, called King George VI "brother" and clapped him merrily on the shoulder. The Royal reaction is unrecorded; the little Princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret, were delighted.

For the first time, on Monday, December 11 at 10 p.m., CBC television's Man At The Center will present a wholly new reassessment of the controversial life of this great Canadian pioneer naturalist, who, upon his untimely death in 1938, was discovered to be not a Canadian Indian, but English.

The colorful hour-long special, written by Lovat Dickson, Grey Owl's publisher and friend during the 30s, features rarely-seen film, including sequences directed in 1931 and 1936 by Grey Owl.

There is also Anahareo, Grey Owl's beautiful Indian wife, who after their marriage in 1925 began gently to influence his ways and thinking towards conservation. Indeed, in his writing, Grey Owl has given her sole credit for having changed him to a devoted protector of wild animals.

The program covers every significant major event of Grey Owl's turbulent 50-year life, from his birth in 1888 and early childhood in Hastings, (deserted by his parents, young Archie was raised by two spinster aunts), his arrival in Northern Ontario in 1906, his early years in the bush and at Bisco; Anahareo's influence and his gradual conversion from hunter and trapper to ardent conservationist, his writings, two triumphant speech tours in England (in 1936 and 1937), and finally his widely-mourned death on April 16, 1938. We review the mystery of his "double" life, which has caused controversy to this day.

Who was Grey Owl? An impostor, seeking glory and the limelight for himself as an Indian? Says the Rt. Hon. John Diefenbaker: "He was the greatest conservationist this nation has produced . . . despite all his imperfections and shortcomings — and all great men have their warts — he should live in Canadian history, indeed in the history of conservation everywhere, as one of those, who in his day and generation, made a contribution that time will not efface."

Indeed, in an era of new, enlightened thinking in environmental preservation, Grey Owl has emerged as a great pioneer naturalist, and a leading force in many of today's accepted ways of thinking in conservation and especially the preservation of the beaver, which he helped make the national symbol of Canada.

Indeed, his legacy to the people of Canada remains today undiminished in ardour and sincerity.

SPECIALS

Tuesday

Hall of Fame, on 5 at 8. The Snow Goose, a quiet, beautiful drama. The marshes of England's Essex coast provide the setting for this story about a withdrawn, deformed artist; an orphaned teen-age girl; and the injured snow goose that brings them together. Jenny Agutter won an Emmy for her protrayal of the orphan in this special, which Paul Gallico adapted from his 1941 novella. Accomplished British actor Richard Haris plays the artist. (60 mins.)

Carol Burnett Special

Carol Burnett romps through the part that made her a star—the role of Princess Winnifred Woebegone in the 1959 play, Once Upon a Mattress. The history of this Hans Christian Andersen fantasy, about a Prince (played by Ken Berry) whose mother, Queen Agravain, does everything to keep him from marriage, is a tribute to the pluck and determination of Miss Burnett. Had it not been for her persistence, the play might have died a natural death after a brief, albeit warmly received critically, tenure off-Broadway.

Cruelty of Trapping

Viewers of CBC-TV's This Land are in for a shock on Wednesday, December 13, at 8:00 p.m., when this usually non-violent series looks at the hard facts of Canada's fur trade and the cost in suffering to animals trapped by cruel devices like the leg-hold trap and the snare.

The program, sub-titled A Certain Shame, traces the history of the fur trade in Canada from the time of the voyageurs up to the present and shows that the prime method of trapping has remained unchanged over three centuries. The leg-hold trap, introduced by the white man to improve the efficiency of Indian trappers, is still the main instrument in use, despite the fact that more humane devices are available.

How animals suffer in the leg-hold trap is shown in A Certain Shame in film taken by Alberta trapper Ed Cesar. It demonstrates that animals caught in this way endure agony, sometimes for many days, until they either die of starvation or the trapper returns to put an end to them. Some may tear or chew off a mangled limb.

In contrast to this there are also scenes of animals trapped and killed in the Conibear trap, the device invented by retired trapper Frank Conibear, which has been endorsed by the Canadian Association For Humane Trapping as the best existing humane trap. CAHT has for many years campaigned to have the barbaric leg-hold trap abolished and has supplied many thousands of Conibear traps to trappers in exchange for the primitive leg-hold trap.

"The major part of A Certain Shame, with its scenes of cruelty to animals," says executive producer John Lackie, "parallels the aims of CAHT, but in our philosophy we go beyond and suggest viable alternatives to trapping. The rational harvesting of fur-bearing animals on fur farms is an alternative — here you have quality control, there's no damage to the pelt and the carcass is not wasted, it's used for cosmetics and fertilizers. We visit a mink ranch near Kitchener and a chinchilla farm near London. The government should consider establishing farms like these for the native peoples of the North who trap for a living.

MOVIES

Thursday

The Third Voice (xxxx), on 4 at 9:30. Fine suspense thriller made economically but excellently about an imposter hired to pose as a murdered financier by his private secretary. Particularly adept direction and script with fine performances by Edmond O'Brien, Laraine Day and Julie London. This movie was made in 1960.

You Can't Run Away From It (xx), on 13 at noon. Jack Lemmon and June Allyson star in this 1956 re-make of the 1934 comedy classic, It Happened One Night, about a runaway heiress who teams up with a newspaper reporter.

The Ghost and Mr. Chicken (x), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. A silly Don Knotts comedy about a timid would-be reporter who spends a night in a supposed haunted house to get a story for his town's newspaper.

Cattle Queen of Montana (xx), on 5 at 4. A young woman determines to establish a ranch in Montana after her father is killed by renegades. This 1954 western stars Barbara Stanwyck and Ronald Reagon.

Winchester '73 (xx), on 7 at 4. A 1967 re-made of the 1950 western about the rivalry for possession of the famed repeating rifle starring Tom Tryon, John Saxon, Joan Blondell and Dan Duryea.

Pandora and the Flying Dutchman (xxx), on 13 at 7:30. A 1951 British-made drama about a man doomed to wander around the world until a woman sacrifices her life for love for him. This fanciful tale is highlighted by a fine cast which includes Ava Gardner, James Mason and Nigel Patrick.

How to Murder Your Wife (xx), on 7 at 7. A madcap farce about an accidental marriage starring Jack Lemmon, Virna Lisi and Terry-Thomas. Lemmon plays a confirmed bachelor who awakes one morning to find a beautiful blonde wearing a wedding ring on her left hand, lying beside him.

Cat on a Hot Tin Roof (xxxx), on 12 at 9. One of Tennessee Williams' most powerful studies of a southern family is successfully brought to the screen with its intensity intact. Elizabeth Taylor gives a fine performance as the wife of a former football hero (Paul Newman) who is dominated by his father and has taken to drink. Burl Ives masterfully re-creates his stage portrayal of Big Daddy. Potent adult drama!

The Gentle Gunman (xxx), on 2 at 11:50. An Irish revolutionist is regarded as a traitor because he believes that the bloodshed will not buy freedom. This English-made 1953 melodrama boasts an excellent cast with John Mills, Dirk Bogarde and Elizabeth Sellers.

Travis Logan, D.A. (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:50. A made-for-TV crime drama that has a homicide case hinging on the size of a shotgun pellet and stars Vic Morrow, Hal Holbrook and Brenda Vaccaro.

1984 (xxx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. Edmond O'Brien, Michael Redgrave and Jan Sterling star in this 1956 film adaptation of George Orwell's novel about what he thought the world would be like in 1984.

The Desperados (xx), on 13 at 12:30. Routine western drama, made in 1943 and starring Randolph Scott, Glenn Ford and Claire Trevor.

REDGRAVE PERFORMS

Famous British actor Sir Michael Redgrave recently played in Voyage Round My Father at Toronto's Royal Alexandra theatre.

Thursday

Telescope, on 2 at 9. Montreal Canadiens goalkeeper Ken Dryden is profiled in tonight's program. Starting his second season with the club, Dryden has won the Calder Trophy as rookie-of-the-year, played in two Stanley Cup play-offs, and was awarded the Smythe Trophy as most valuable player in the play-offs. (30 mins.)

International Performance, on 9 at 9. A rare treat for classical music lovers: three musical giants play Beethoven. Pianists Claudio Arrau and the late Robert Cacadesus, and violinist Zino Francescatti perform sonatas composed in the early stages of Beethoven's deafness. (Works heard on tonight's program are available on records). 60 mins.)

Why Bonanza Failed

By RICHARD K. SHULL

HOLLYWOOD — For a time, NBC considered moving Bonanza to Saturday nights and a slow death opposite All in the Family. So maybe it was merciful the network, in the end, decided to kill the old show outright at the end of the year.

The action was like a cowboy putting a bullet through the head of his favorite horse after the critter had suffered a broken leg. And it's true Bonanza definitely was limping this season.

It suffered a series of blows last spring. First, David Dortort, the executive producer who had clucked over the series like a mother hen from the beginning, cut himself loose from it. He moved his offices to another studio and put Bonanza on its own.

Then the network decided to tamper with the show's time period, usually a mistake if a series is successful, and moved it to Tuesday night where a rating war already was in progress between ABC and CBS.

But, the worst blow to the series was the loss of Dan Blocker, easily the most popular member of the troupe whose zest for life buoyed everyone and everything around him including the viewers out there beyond the 21-inch tube.

Blocker died of a medical mishap last May 14 following a gall bladder operation.

The combination of these things put "Bonanza" in an unfamiliar position this season — running third in a field of three for its time slot on the rating charts.

In its 13½ seasons on NBC, Bonanza has been good to everyone connected with it. During the middle 1960s, it was NBC's biggest rating getter.

All the people on the show became millionaires.

One of the ironies of the Bonanza success story was that it probably wouldn't have gone beyond the first 13 weeks except for a fluke — it was in color.

When it made its debut in the fall of 1959, the audience received it with a yawn. It was slotted on Saturday night opposite the nation's most popular show, Perry Mason.

But in those days, NBC's parent company, RCA, had warehouses full of color sets which wouldn't sell. And CBS ABC were ignoring color.

Bonanza sweat out its first two years, playing primarily to appliance dealers and propped up by a subsidy from RCA.

Then in the fall of 1961, NBC shifted it to Sunday night where the show's mixture of high moral principals and gunplay built a huge audience. It dominated the rating charts until 1967 when the Smothers Brothers put a dent in its ratings.

For its 11 seasons on Sunday night, it was a major TV force.

The show's fall premiere back in September may also have contributed to its undoing. The special two-hour episode on Sept. 12 was the fourth most-watched show of that week, easily winning its time period in ratings.

But, there were repercussions. The story, written and directed and starring Michael Landon, had his Little Joe character marry Bonnie Bedelia. But she was murdered before the end of the episode. It's traditional on Bonanza that women never live beyond the closing commercial.

The network had overpromted and oversold the idea of the marriage. Masses of letters received from all over the country indicated the viewers felt they had been cheated. They had expected Bonnie to be a regular on the show.

CBC Drama a Triumph!

JULIETTE and her guest Rich Little clown it up on The Very Merry Juliette Christmas special, Sunday, Dec. 10, at 9 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Despite the put-downs Canadian television is constantly receiving, there are and have been some very good shows created in CBC and CTV studios.

It's unfortunate that for many people a couple of dead turkeys make the whole cageful of live ones something to shun.

So probably a good deal fewer people than it deserved were on hand last week to witness a CBC triumph — more than that, a Canadian actors' and writer's triumph.

The show was David French's Leaving Home, a first play of such strength and truth, acted with such conviction that it left an indelible impression and provided one of those relatively rare television evenings of emotional and intellectual sustenance.

Already performed successfully on stage by Toronto's Tarragon Factory Lab Theatre, Leaving Home is a camera's eye in the hands of an astute and humane observer. Discarding all superfluity, it concentrates on the root and growth of a family's inner antagonisms and malaise.

Jacob, head of the family, a hot-tempered Newfoundlander, torn by conflicts of natural pride and a sense of inferiority; by male jealousy, love and resentment of his eldest son, and by anger over the marriage of the younger to a Roman Catholic girl, explodes into destructive rage when the elder's plans to leave home are revealed.

It's one of those situations when one watches a headlong rush downhill to ruin while being aware that the right action, the right words — or no words at the right time — could divert or at least ameliorate the ultimate destruction.

Caught up in the descent and most vulnerable is the mother who understands too well what is happening.

The teenage son dreading his imminent, too-early marriage, the girl, her mother, even Ben, the eldest son, will leave and wounds will soon heal over in some other place.

But Mary, the mother, cannot escape the bonds of her conscience, her pity and the years.

The play has tautness and drive. There are fine climaxes and there is contrast.

Only once did the play lapse from its sustained level of emotional energy. This was in the centre of the piece when the virago mother of the bride-to-be entered with her own lover-boy in tow.

Suddenly the drive was gone, the pace slowed to a ho-hum saunter.

The fault is in the play which needs pruning and tightening at this point. Annie Butler who played the part provided a wholly convincing performance, briefer but not inferior to Shelley Winters' bitchy mother in A Patch of Blue.

Sean Sullivan's Jacob was wonderful to watch. His rages were cataclysmic, his light moments underlayed with a sense of venom, his goadings of his son double-lashed from an impulse of masochism.

Former Victoria actress Maureen Fitzgerald, agonized and powerless to prevent what is happening, crying out in protest and anger; crushed into a monolithic silence that is bleakly eloquent, created a strong, gauntly molded heart-rending image of the wife.

Her one flaw was an inconsistency of speech mannerism and an off-and-on hint of dialect that seemed, in any event, unnecessary.

Relationships throughout the play were clear, especially the almost unspoken bond between the two brothers.

Television viewers may not get another chance to see this outstanding Canadian play with this fine Canadian cast. But local theatre-goers will see the play for it is to be the subject and end production of a Victoria Theatre Guild workshop early in the new year.

Hopefully playwright French will be able to accept the Guild's invitation to be present at that time.

Television Questions and Answers

By RICHARD K. SHULL

Q: My friend and I have made a bet. He says Bing Crosby is the richest man in the movie world. I say Bob Hope is by a few million. In other words, who has the most money, Crosby or Hope? —N.P.

A: No contest. Hope wins by a bundle. Fortune magazine, in a list of the nation's wealthiest men, put Hope in the $200 million class. No other show-business character even made the list. Crosby's fortune was decimated with the death of his first wife. He had to pay inheritance taxes on half of everything he owned.

Q: Settle an argument between my husband and me. He says that Rochester (of Jack Benny) is an independent actor and I say he's Jack Benny's chauffeur or his all-round valet and he got Rochester started. Who's right? — E.T.T.

A: Eddie Anderson was an actor long before he took the radio-movie-TV role of Benny's valet. On a Benny TV special not too many years ago, the two set the record straight and Anderson explained to the TV audience that because of the Civil rights struggle and changing times, he never again would appear in the role of the menial. Since then, when Rochester does appear on a Benny show, it's as Benny's long-time acquaintance, not employee.

Variety Shows Losing In the Ratings Game

By CAROL BRADY
Times Staff

Two years ago the aristocrat of the variety show, Ed Sullivan, lost out on the Neilson ratings and found himself out of a job after twenty-one years in the business.

Is the same fate due Carol Burnett, Sonny and Cher, Julie Andrews and others?

Could be.

Figures released for the beginning of the 1972-73 season indicate these stars and the shows they host are hanging tenuously to their time slots.

Each current variety program boasts a talented and professional musical host — in the past a selling advantage but now a costly commodity. And, every one of these personalities possessed a once-successful gimmick.

But the Carol Burnett familiarity has lost its charm; the Cher put-down is no longer chic; the Flip Wilson grassroots humor has worn thin and Bill Cosby has been overexposed.

Miss Burnett looks and performs in an apparent state of fatigue. Her scripts lack humor and are often screamed through, with the subtle one-liner losing its impact in a loud shout.

The variety show format, no longer able to rely on the cutting edge of new creative material, has fallen victim to a battering ram of repetition. Tell the same joke often enough and the fools will laugh. Well, they're not laughing and neither are the Neilson ratings.

Guest stars incite much of the boredom that the variety show viewer is now experiencing. Like strippers in a nightclub circuit, they make the rounds. They have become predictable and over-exposed.

Praise, however, should be directed to some singularly outstanding bright spots in each of the currently running variety shows.

The constant excellence and originality of Harvey Korman on the Carol Burnett show; Bill Cosby's delightful childhood reminiscences; Cher's astonishing wardrobe and Flip Wilson's clever sets. For the moment these will probably sustain the viewer and the ratings for one more season.

But recent rumbling from the three major networks, CBS, NBC and ABC, indicate much shuffling of time slots and certainly an upcoming cancellation or two. A clear cue that the viewer and the networks are bored with the variety show format.

Even the reigning queen of musicals, Julie Andrews (who is being paid $8 million for a two year contract) is sitting on the bottom rung of the Neilson ladder.

It is hoped that the death of the variety show will stimulate the television industry and revive some very talented television personalities.

But when the viewer is subjected to the barrage of Movie of the Week presentations and assaulted with crime dramas, it seems clear that the days of live, original musical variety shows are numbered.

7 Hijackers Slain in Mid-Air Battle, Terror Plunge

Times News Services

ADDIS ABABA — Six hijackers died and a seventh was fatally wounded today in a gun battle aboard an Ethiopian airliner as it plunged earthward with a hole torn in its side by a grenade.

But the pilot of the stricken Boeing 707 was able to land the craft at Addis Ababa airport a few minutes later.

Ethiopian Airlines said two security guards and four passengers were injured by grenade fragments. The plane was carrying about 100 passengers on a flight from Addis Ababa to Paris.

All of the hijackers — believed to be members of the seccessionist Eritrean Liberation Front — were killed by security guards. Six died aboard the plane and the seventh died in hosptal later.

One of the passengers injured in the blast, Temple University Prof. Roderich Hilsinger of Philadelphia, possibly saved the lives of many passengers by grabbing the grenade and throwing it into an unoccupied corner of the plane after a wounded hijacker pulled the pin and dropped it in the aisle.

The plane left Addis Ababa airport at about 4:30 a.m.

It was about 10 minutes out when a man suddenly appeared at the division between the first class and the economy seats with a pistol and a grenade.

Prof. Richard Wylie, 30, also of Temple University said. Wylie quoted the man as saying: "This is a hijack, stay in your seats."

"Dr. Hilsinger and I were sitting in the most forward seats of the economy class and the man was standing right beside us," Wylie said.

"No sooner had he said it was a hijacking, when one of the security guards opened fire and wounded the man. He staggered but managed to pull the pin from the grenade which he dropped right at the feet of Dr. Hilsinger, who had the aisle seat.

"Dr. Hilsinger immediately picked up the grenade and threw it into the opposite corner where the seats were unoccupied.

"It exploded there, tearing a great hole in the plane's side. Dr. Hilsinger took most of the force of the explosion, receiving shrapnel wounds in the face, shoulders and ankles.

"It was an extremely brave act by Dr. Hilsinger to throw the grenade away and probably saved many people from injury."

"The next 2½ minutes were an absolute nightmare," Wylie added. "Bullets were flying everywhere as the hijackers fought it out with the security men.

"The plane was full of smoke and when the grenade exploded, the plane dropped like a stone and we thought that this was the end.

"But the pilot managed to get control again and we landed safetly at Addis Ababa a few minutes later. It was a fine bit of piloting and the Ethiopian security guards did a marvellous job of work."

One of the dead sky pirates was a woman — killed as she threw herself across the body of a male accomplice, apparently to shield him from security guards' bullets.

In Damascus, the Eritrean Liberation Front today refused to confirm or deny responsibility for the hijack attempt. Front leader, however, have recently pledged to escalate operations against Ethiopia in their continued effort to liberate the former Italian colony ceded to Ethiopia in 1945.

The Front has been blamed for previous hijack attempts in Ethiopia and as a result security guards are placed on all Ethiopian Airlines planes.

Needless Antibiotics 'Killing Thousands'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Perhaps tens of thousands of people in the U.S. are dying each year because of needlessly administered antibiotics, a top official of that country's Food and Drug Administration told a Senate subcommittee Thursday.

As well as the deaths, the lives of millions of people are endangered by the massive over-prescription and misprescription of drugs, Dr. Henry Simmons told a committee investigating over-the-counter drug sales.

Another doctor, Dr. Henry Dowling, an infections specialist and former chairman of the Council on Drugs of the American Medical Association echoed Simmons statements and added that drastic reforms are needed to deter physicians from prescribing antibiotics for diseases against which they are ineffective and for problems for which safer therapy is available.

U.S. doctors prescribe between 10 and 20 times antibiotics as is medically justified, Dowling told the committee.

"It is doubtful that the average person has an illness that requires treatment with an antibiotic more often than once every five or 10 years," he said.

The most popular antibiotics include the penicillins, effective against a narrow range of infections; erythromycin, effective against a medium spectrum, and the tetracyclines and chloramphenicol, effective against a broad spectrum.

The threat to the public health in excessive use of antibiotics arises from the fact that in killing certain strains of bacteria they permit other strains to flourish.

In one of the latest incidents of this kind, said Dowling, a strain of typhoid bacilli has been found to be resistant to ampicillin.

"A few years ago, we were resting secure in the knowledge that we had two effective drugs for use in typhoid fever: chloramphenicol and ampicillin," Dowling said.

"Then a strain of typhoid bacilli was found that was resistant to chloramphenicol, and now one is resistant to ampicillin. Where is our security now?" he asked.

"Before too long we may be back to the 1930s when we had no effective therapy for this disease and could only stand by and watch 10 to 15 per cent of the patients die, while others suffered through weeks of serious illness," Dowling warned.

In the 1950s, over-use of penicillin led to hospital epidemics of dread staphylococcus infection.

The nick-of-time development of semi-synthetic pencillins brought the situation under control.

The FDA has warned that over-use of the semi-synthetics could deny protection against new outbreaks.

Much testimony centred on the record of production, promotion and prescribing of chloramphenicol, introduced in 1949 by Parke-Davis as chloromycetin.

SPEEDY REFUNDS

OTTAWA (CP) — Roughly 6.5 million Canadians are expected to get refunds when they file their 1972 income tax returns early next year, revenue department officials said Thursday.

And to get the money to them faster, the government has devised a special sticker that taxpayers can place on their tax-return envelopes to speed the journey through the processing mill.

A spokesman explained the sticker contains a postal code to be pasted over the existing code on the front of the pre-addressed return envelope if a refund is being sought. The post office will sort these into seperate bags which will be expedited through the assessment process.

"There will be very many taxpayers anxious to file early and get their refunds early," Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury said in an interview.

U.S. Shows More Jobs, Prices Up

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — While the rate of unemployment in the U.S. is on the decline, inflation is making steady gains, according to two sets of statistics released today by the U.S. labor department.

The unemployment rate dropped last month from 5.5 per cent of the labor force to 5.2 per cent—the lowest figure in 27 months—with 82.5 million Americans holding jobs, the department said today.

A report released Thursday showed wholesale prices in the U.S. leaped ahead at an annual rate of 7.2 per cent last month. Farm and food products lead, as usual.

The price rise for the month 0.6 per cent both before and after seasonal adjustments—lifted the department's wholesale price index to 5.4 per cent above its level of a year ago, the point where wage and price controls began.

All a Plot —Young

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

CAMPBELL RIVER — There was a plot between the school's superintendent and a group of trustees to force high school principal John Young to quit, John Laxton, counsel for Young, told a judicial hearing in its 10th day today.

A set of 27 rules handed to Young on Aug. 3 were a "manufactured ultimatum designed to make Young resign."

"They well knew Young's educational philosophy would not allow him to accept these rules, which were illegal anyway," Laxton said.

"The rules were conceived in sin and illegitimate at birth."

Offering his final legal argument after the the three-man board of reference headed by Victoria lawyer B. J. B. Morahan, had heard testimony from 11 witnesses and received 103 exhibits, Laxton said a very high standard of proof was required in the matter of Young's professional position.

The set of 27 rules attempted to enforce attendance, parental notes of excuse and controlled registration on high school students. Laxton said they were "largely illegal, beyond the power of the board to promulgate and constituted a flagrant abuse of the board's powers."

In a detailed analysis, Young claimed that the administration of a school system in British Columbia has its powers and areas of jurisdiction strictly limited by statute.

He said a section of the Public Schools Act was even deemed necessary by the legislature to empower boards to control students' dress.

In drawing up its rules Campbell River School Board was attempting to rewrite the Public School Act, Laxton said.

The rules illegally stripped the high school principal of several of his specifically regulated powers, Laxton said. "They are so blatantly wrong that Mr. Ramsay (superintendent) must have known it in advising the board."

Witnesses Flee Rape, Murder

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Virtually the entire 23,000 Jehovah's Witnesses in the East African nation of Malawi have fled the country in the last two months as a result of a government campaign against them, according to reports reaching here.

In a wave of violence that swept the country, a number of Jehovah's Witnesses were killed, raped or brutally beaten, the latest issue of the organization's magazine Awake reports.

It said that there were at least 10 known dead in Malawi and that the number might be as high as 60.

Diplomatic sources here said that they had received reports of between 12 and 20 having been killed.

Most of the community, about 18,000 Malawians, has crossed into Zambia, where its members have been placed in makeshift refugee camp near Chipata in the southeast corner of the country. The others fled into Mozambique.

Zambia rural development minister Reuben Kamanga, said last week after visiting the camp that an average of nine persons were dying every day, apparently of hunger. Many of these victims have been children.

The attacks against the sect were apparently touched off by a series of resolutions against "certain fanatical religious sects" passed at the annual conference of the ruling Malawi Congress Party in September.

The Jehovah's Witnesses were mentioned specifically.

Apollo Half Way

The big powerplant fired a two-second burst 9:03 p.m. PST. and Apollo 17 was more than halfway to the moon at the time.

The manoeuvre added seven miles an hour to the spaceship's 2,766 mph speed. That was enough to switch Apollo 17 from a course that would have hit the moon to a path that will take the astronauts an estimated 61 miles in front of the sphere when they brake into orbit.

BRUSSELS — Foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization gave permission today for individual members of the 15-nation alliance to enter into negotiations to establish bilateral relations with East Germany.

But their 1,000-word communique issued at the end of a two-day ministerial council meeting reaffirmed continued NATO support for West Germany's policy of working "towards a state of peace in Europe in which the German people regain their unity through self-determination."

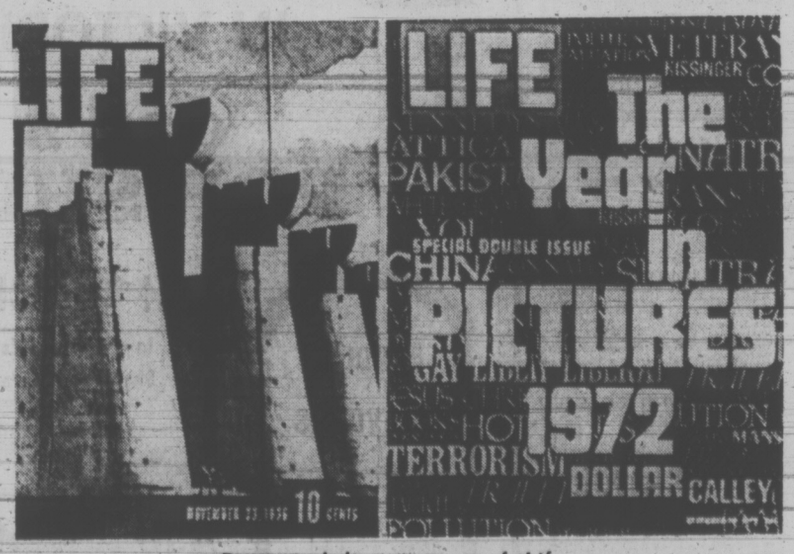
In Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau said Canada will likely extend official diplomatic recognition to East Germany once a treaty of recognition is signed by East and West Germany.



First and last issues of Life

Death Comes to Life After 36 Years

NEW YORK (AP) — Life magazine will discontinue publication with the issue of Dec. 29, Time Inc. announced today.

The publisher said the 36-year-old magazine, famous for its pioneering use of news photographs, will be folded because of "continuing losses."

The year-end double issue will mark the close of the weekly magazine founded by Henry Luce in 1936.

Shortly after the announcement, Canadian publisher Joseph Azaria offered to negotiate for the purchase of the magazine. In a telegram from Montreal to the board chairman of Time-Life Inc., Azaria said he was "equipped to bring a successful management team to preserve the life of Life."

Life was published at "very substantial deficits in 1969 and 1970 and smaller deficits in 1971 and 1972," the publisher said.

"As our projections for 1973 took shape, however, they showed a resumption of heavy losses, and the indications for 1974 were even more unfavorable," the publisher, Time Inc., added.

At about 10:45 a.m., grim-faced staff members of the magazine began to gather for a meeting on the eighth floor of the Time-Life building at Sixth Avenue and 50th Street in Manhattan.

About 250 to 300 staff workers sat in chairs or stood against the walls, waiting for the meeting, which was closed to outsiders, to begin at 11 a.m.

Life lasted more than a year longer than its chief competitor, Look, which ceased publication on Oct. 19, 1971. Look also blamed rising costs, especially postal rates.

In the last two years, Life reduced its circulation from 8.5 million copies to 5.5 million and increased its newsstand price in an attempt to build a high-quality audience.

"The impact of these moves was undercut by a very heavy increase in second-class postal rates which affected Life, particularly because of its large page size, the executives' statement said.

They said the magazine was faced with an increase of 170.2 per cent in such rates over five years.

People on a Road Back —But It's Not Enough

Item: To the Gorge Road rehabilitation hospital this afternoon for another session with my comely therapist who is determined that I'll walk properly again if she has to kill me in the process.

It's like no other hospital I've ever visited. Since everybody, even the very ancient patient, is theoretically on the road back from some low point in his life there's a contagious spirit of determination and sometimes heroic effort. The scene in the therapy room with everyone working like billy-be-damned is inspiring. The whole place and all of the staff I've met radiate an atmosphere of resolute recovery that's almost never found in other hospitals.

Yet at "The Gorge", too, there's a sad overcrowding, so much so that the physiotherapy gals have had to open their coffee retreat to patients. There's a long waiting list just as there'll be when the ajoining new 300-bed extended care hospital is opened at the end of January.

I hobbled out, as I always do, profoundly grateful to people with a sense of mission, profoundly ashamed of a country that fails to meet the needs of everyone.

Item: A morning to ponder the question: How far are the banks going to go in tarting up their once austere image?

That column of some weeks ago about Mary of the Royal Bank has found its way to the inner sanctum of the Royal's main office in St. Catherine's Street, Montreal, and the result is a hearty letter from the manager himself, John Clarke, who began his career here at the Royal's Fort Street branch more than 25 years ago when banks, by God, were banks and not yet in show business.

John writes to tell me about the main branch's Royal Oktoberfest, a three-day revelry fashioned after the famous Munich beer festival. Mary was there in the flesh to hand out roses to the first 400 ladies. You could have a Polaroid picture taken with her if that's what you wanted. The Old Munich Band, a six-piece combo with an oom-pah sound, went oom-pah as the guests had apple strudel with root beer and gave the old Munich toast "Ein Prosit Der Gemuetlichkeit!" ("How's your sister!") A drawing was made for a Lufthansa trip to the real thing in Munich where the beer is Lowenbrau and not the A and W kind.

"Unusual for a bank?" asks John Clarke rhetorically. "Yes, but after all the attitude of banks and bankers has, along with other business, changed and we want to show that we are human, too, and, like our customers and friends, enjoy a little fun now and then."

Kind of makes you wonder how far they'll go. Will they ever give money away, like apple strudel? Who can tell?

Item: The newest edition of the Humanist in Canada magazine on my desk this morning, it being almost entirely devoted to the writing and the life of the greatest of all humanists, Bertrand Russell, and I found it a moving experience.

Not the least interesting thing about Lord Russell was his love affair with his second wife and there is an exchange of their sentiments that is most memorable.

"Bertie" had written these lines to Lady Edith:

Through the long years
I sought peace.
I found ecstasy, I found anguish,
I found madness,
I found loneliness.
I found the solitary pain that gnaws the heart.
But peace I did not find.

Now, old and near my end,
I have known you,
And, knowing you,
I have found both ecstasy and peace.
I know rest.
After so many lonely years,
I know what life and love may be.
Now, if I sleep,
I shall sleep fulfilled.

And Edith, asked by a television interviewer to describe what Lord Russell was really like, summed it all up in two sentences:

"He was passionate, gentle, considerate, generous, and faithfully good natured, endlessly good fun. He was an exceptionally great man, a noble human being, utterly delightful and very dear."

Such fine sentiment reminded me of the last will of Sean O'Casey and I brought down from its shelf Eileen O'Casey's book, "Sean," published last year by MacMillans. The will that Sean wrote in September, 1962, reads this way:

"I bequeath and leave to my beloved wife, Eileen O'Casey, all I have and hope to get: all royalties due, all contracts, all manuscripts and typescripts, all royalties to come, fees of every sort — in short, all I am possessed of, and all moneys my work may earn in future years. I give all my goods, estate valuation and all else, to her in gratitude for many, many years of happy and fruitful companionship; and with all I bequeath to her my deep love, as deep now, deeper, indeed, than, the love I felt for her in earlier years."

Item: Two items across my desk today that set me to thinking about the arbitrary way that we judge news.

One: a routine notice that Saturday, Dec. 9, will be another of the once-monthly "newspaper days" at the Recycling Depot at 4026 Borden Street (next to the car-testing station) and that the station will be accepting old newspapers from nine-to-five. Last month's newspaper day total was a whopping 40 tons and someone out there has figured it out that that's the equivalent of 680 trees.

Two: A report by the Greater Victoria Citizens' Counselling Centre and it surprised me to read about its phenomenal growth. Marriage counselling sessions have tripled in a year, now run to more than 125 sessions each month. The numbers of people taking part in groups and workshops has increased six times over. Phone calls at the centre, itself, are running at more than 3,000 a year with 27 counsellors ready to give their help and another 20 in training.

These are great stories of quiet, day-to-day dedication by good citizens who are more interested in service than in recognition, but not "news", as we judge it and that's a pity.

'Electric Personality Finally Caught Fire'

Times Staff

What do you do when you've lost everything you own — including a valuable collection of antiques and paintings that can never be replaced?

You crack jokes if you're born with humor and tenavity.

Miss Alyx Toppin looked at her fire-gutted cottage overlooking Haro Strait at 2944 Phyllis this morning, straightened her back, and quipped:

"My electric personality finally caught fire!"

Underneath the front, however, it was obvious the charred remains of a lifetime collection of valuable antiques and paintings was hard to take.

When neighbors phoned her at the store she operates, the Antique Shop, 1032 Fort, at 5:45 p.m. Thursday she left immediately. By the time she and the Saanich fire department arrived the 60-year-old home was destroyed.

Miss Toppin comes from a wealthy Ulster family and had followed the interests of her father, an ex-museum director and author of many books on ceramics and pottery.

a time, she said:

"People keep asking me how I can be calm at a time like this. I tell them that when you've lived through the Irish civil war and come through the air raids and bombings of the Second World War you learn to take everything in your stride."

"How am I going to make out my income tax with no desk?"

She searched the home, stepping gingerly over the debris. She said that although she had insurance, it couldn't in any way cover the valuables she's lost.

"Over in that corner is a priceless marble head buried beneath the debris," she said.

She searched in vain for a valuable 18th century painting insured for $10,000.

Miss Toppin mused on the cause of the fire:

"It could be anything. I'd been using a lot more heat to keep warm and the furnace is an old one."

$100,000 Wince

Victoria has spent more than $72,000 on building new change room and toilet facilities at Thetis Lake Park this year, plus another $20,000 on maintenance.

The figure of nearly $100,000, reported to Thursday's finance committee meeting, made some aldermen wince. Ald. Harold Olafson complained that spending so much on a regional facility was "just ridiculous."

Agreeing, Mayor Peter Pollen said: "The sooner we face the facts of life and recognize that this is a regional park, and get it into the regional park system, the better."

Cold, Colder Coldest!

It's colder in Victoria than in the Arctic.

While polar bear slept in relatively warm 30-degree temperatures overnight, Victorians shivered as the mercury hit a record low of 11 degrees.

Weathermen say the massive cold front which has brought freezing temperatures to Victoria for several days, is now causing sub-zero temperatures in Oregon and leaving the Arctic relatively warm.

Victoria's low overnight was 14 degrees lower than the old record of 25 set on Dec. 8, 1944.

Warmer air is headed for the capital region, weathermen say, and will bring increasing clouds and the possibility of snow overnight.

Clouds should clear by noon Saturday, however, with colder temperatures returning in the afternoon.

In Vancouver it was a record 12 degrees, the coldest Dec. 8 since 1949 when the temperature dropped to 21. Other records were set in Nanaimo, where it was 6 degrees; Abbotsford, where it was 14, and Tofino, which recorded 12 degrees. It was a record 24 below in Cranbrook, 13 below in Williams Lake and 3 below in Penticton.

Major Revamping Facing Hospital Administration

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Capital Regional Hospital Board next week will consider revamping its administration to get co-ordinated hospital development in Greater Victoria rolling.

Among proposals to go before the board Wednesday will be:

—hiring a well-qualified director or co-ordinator to pull the regional board's hospital work together, initiate and guide the planning and provide a link between the board, its advisers, doctors in the community, hospitals and the provincial government.

—spelling out the function of the board's six-man advisory committee, a group of doctors and hospital administrators charged with advising the board on technical matters. It is generally agreed the committee has been working hard but not effectively.

—expanding the advisory committee from six to seven which would more broadly represent hospital administration, the medical profession, nursing or other para-medical support staff, social services and the urban and rural community.

The recommendations were prepared by Dennis Young, the regional board's executive director, at the request of Art Young, chairman of the regional hospital board, and were considered at an exceutive meeting Thursday.

With minor modifications they will be recommended to the full regional hospital board when it next meets on Wednesday.

'Developed in Isolation'

On the question of a regional hospital co-ordinator, Young's report says:

"When considering the importance of someone to fill this role and the qualifications that should be brought to the job, sight must not be lost of the fact that the Capital region is the second most densely populated area in British Columbia.

"For a number of years inadequate attention has been given to the quality of the physical plant for the provision of acute hospital care, and what improvements have been effected for individual hospitals have largely been developed in isolation from the over-all needs of the total community."

Young said a review of salaries being paid persons with the needed qualifications suggested a salary of $22,000 to $23,000 was in order.

"I realize that this is a high salary and the proposal may be difficult for board members to accept, but I would point out that his job would be to guide the expenditure of a capital program . . . of up to $24 million over the next five years and will have a great influence on hospital operating costs totalling many millions of dollars annually."

Of the advisory committee, he said:

"It seems to me that the committee has not been presented with a clearly identifiable role nor with adequate resources to follow up the many ideas initiated by its members.

"In addition, it is my opinion that the committee is too narrowly based and that the resources of the community have not been fully utilized in developing a group of persons with a broad cross-section of interests, capable of determining meaningful recommendations for the improvement of hospital facilities."

The vagueness of the advisory committee's function "had undoubtedly been a contributor to the lack of firm recommendations in many areas," said Young, in proposing five specific functions it should fulfil.

These include assisting in development of the regional board's policy for delivering health care, recommending changes to regulations and legislation to enable such policy to be effective, recommending meaningful and effective programs of health or hospital care, reporting on special needs such as ambulance services.

In other business the executive committee of the regional hospital board Thursday approved having the chairman meet with Health Minister Dennis Cocke and federal officials to try and settle the future of Veterans Hospital.

Mount St. Mary Renovation Reconsidered

A plan to renovate Mount St. Mary Hospital for close to $500,000 is being examined further by the provincial government and may lead to 75 more beds being added.

But the second look may also lead to "a very conservative" modernization program instead.

The hospital at 999 Burdett has been operated by the Sisters of St. Ann for 31 years and has about 130 patients who are chronically ill and mostly elderly.

The Capital Regional Hospital Board last April approved the modernization program after a study was undertaken by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, the provincial agency administering hospitals.

The updating would have added only three new beds, with most of the money going to improve nursing facilities, patient care areas and such sections as the dietary department.

While the program was approved by the regional directors, it still requires approval of the provincial government and a letter received by the regional hospital board executive at its meeting Thursday indicates the BCHIS wants to give more study to the matter.

The letter is from assistant deputy minister Jim Mainguy to T. S. Shorthouse, chairman of the Mount St. Mary Hospital board and in it he notes the BCHIS study indicated cost of the renovation program was estimated at about $466,000.

After the study BCHIS looked further into advantages and disadvantages of spending that much money to improve the hospital without expanding accommodation, the letter says.

"While the improvements outlined were estimated to allow for savings in operating cost, further work was felt to be necessary to see the extent to which the operating savings might offset the additional capital cost.

"The team which did the original study has been looking into these factors to see the implications of trying to add, say, 75 beds to Mount St. Mary in the interests of further operating economies, further improvement in service, and the location of additional extended care beds in the downtown area," Mainguy wrote.

"Information from the study should make it possible to examine more precisely the cost benefits of developing beds at Mount St. Mary or at other locations.

"If, as a result of this, the construction of additional beds on other sites is favored, then there may be reason to concentrate the capital funds at other locations and adopt a very conservative renovation program for Mount St. Mary."

Mainguy estimated the additional study will be completed within the next two months.

$19,439 Cafeteria Renovation

A contract for $19,439, of renovation work to government employees' cafeteria facilities has been let by the department of public works to Cana Construction Ltd. of Victoria.

Public Works Minister Bill Harley announced the award today. The work is to be done on the government cafeteria on Michigan Street. The government recently completed work on a cafeteria in the Douglas Building.

Further work on the Douglas Building cafeteria was covered in a recent contract awarded to David's Plumbing and Heating, 4251 Torquay Drive. The contract is for $8,933 for ducting and steam piping work.

ICE STILL TOO WEAK FOR SKATNG—POLICE

This week's cold temperatures have frozen most Greater Victoria lakes and ponds but local police and RCMP warn people not to walk or skate on them.

Saanich police said youngsters walking on the edges of Beaver Lake Thursday night were asked to leave because the ice is "far too thin" and there are open patches in the middle.

Elk Lake has not begun to freeze and Panama Flats, near Carey and Interurban, is dry. The creek running down the middle of the flats is unsafe, police said.

Colwood RCMP asked people skating on Portage Inlet Thursday to leave, and Langford, Colwood and Glen Lakes are frozen "just on the edges."

A Victoria parks department spokesman said the ponds in Beacon Hill Park are "not good enough to support any numbers."

"We make tests before we allow them on the ice," said the spokesman.

Sidney RCMP said Durrance Lake has not frozen and other ponds within their jurisdiction are unsafe.

Freezing Northeasterlies Doesn't Stop Steelheaders

All except for those crazy steelhead anglers!

When normal people are huddled by the fireside, repairing gear and muttering into a hot toddy, steelheaders are out on snowshoes and battling iced-up lines for a chance to catch one of these sea-run rainbows.

As Arnie Williams of Duncan said: "If he's not freezing to death, he's not happy."

The San Juan River-Harris Creek system is in fishable condition and a few anglers have been striking it lucky.

Waters are slightly low and clear, but still in prime condition, in the lower reaches of the Cowichan River and the Koksilah lacks enough water to be productive.

Further up-Island, the odd steelhead has been taken out of the Stamp and Little Qualicum rivers as well as the lower part of the Somass.

Peter Patrick of Courtenay, who arrived home with a 14-pounder, was one of the fortunates fishing the controlled-flow waters of the Puntledge River this past week.

Campbell River seems to be the only stream still producing steelhead in that general vicinity, where freezing temperatures have radically lowered stream levels.

The only spots on the Island suggested as possible trout angling meccas have been Brannen and Westwood lakes near Nanaimo, where cold-fingered fly fishermen have been hauling out several limits.

And as for salmon fishing, the winter springs are undoubtedly out there — if you care to try for them.

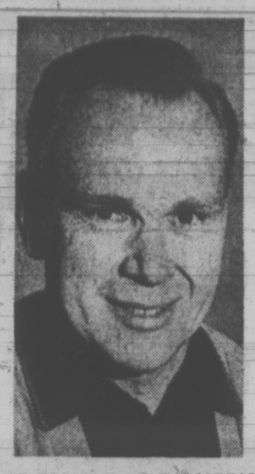
NIBBLES: This week's nosegay of thorns goes to the federal fisheries department . . . This sanctimonious body has asked that a meeting with the Amalgamated Conservation Society, scheduled for January after being postponed earlier this month, be off-limits to the press . . . Supposedly the theory behind this move, which the ACS will undoubtedly have to honor in order to have the meeting, is that the dialogue can be more free . . .It's understandable that they don't want to air their dirty laundry in public, but one mustn't lose sight of the fact that we, the public, pay the departmental representatives' salaries . . . There should be no room for prima donna tactics among employees of a government branch that regulates activities of vital interest to both sports and commercial fishermen.

Outdoorsmen are again reminded of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association turkey shoot Saturday and Sunday at the club's Goldstream layout. . . . Hours are from 9 a.m. 'til dark each day . . . Included in the competition are trap shooting, archery, .22 rifle running deer, lucky wheels and lucky circles.



BOWLER OF WEEK

Improving with each game, George Waugh topped men's fivepin division in ninth week of annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. George earned weekly award as he rolled 280-306-329—915 series in Monday Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

New Storm Hits Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, accused commissioner Bowie Kuhn Thursday of making a fraudulent statement and said player negotiations had been set back by "an act that only the most rank amateur would perform."

Miller said he was referring to a news conference held by the commissioner in Hawaii Nov. 29 at which, he insisted, Kuhn violated an understanding between owners' and players' negotiating committees to resolve their problems privately and not in a public forum.

"Not only has Mr. Khun shown questionable integrity in breaking that agreement," said Miller, "he has performed an extremely destructive act in terms of negotiations."

Kuhn had no immediate comment.

Miller called a news conference to detail some of the facets of the latest conflict which he had touched upon informally a week ago.

"The commissioner's act has only served to harden the players' position," he added.

He declined, however, to predict that baseball may again be hit by a players' strike such as the unprecedented action last spring that delayed opening of the regular season 10 days.

"A strike occurs only when there is a complete falldown of negotiations, when there is an impasse.

"We have not reached that stage yet. We are still negotiating. It is our hope that we can still reach an amicable nd practical agreement. We have another meeting scheduled next Tuesday."

He said that, at the Hawaii news conference, Kuhn outlined an owners' proposal for modifying the stringent reserve clause, which binds a player to one club for life unless he is sold or traded. Kuhn said the players had rejected the plan, which he labelled historic and spectacular.

"Those words were clearly intended to deceive the public and players," Miller said. "His predictions of catastrophe if the terms were not accepted were a transparent and inept attempt to psych the players and the fans."

The owners' proposal, as presented by Kuhn, called for free agent status for any player with five years' major league experience not offered at least $30,000 for his sixth year or a player of eight years' experience not offered $40,000 for his ninth year.

"Were it presently in effect, this magnanimous offer would probably affect five of the 960 players now on major league rosters," Miller said.

Miller said the owners actually were offering the players salary increase of one-half of one per cent, and even less than that if owners were allowed to go through with the suggestion that rosters be cut from 25 to 23 men.

He charged that baseball salaries fall below those in the other major professional sports — football, basketball and hockey — and cited the National Basketball Association's minimum of $20,000 compared with baseball's $14,000 as an example.

"We are seeking a base pay of $15,500 in 1973, then $16,500 in 1974 and $17,500 in 1975," Miller said.

"These are not unreasonable demands. Most people are brainwashed with the idea that pro sports don't make money."

Miller outlined other player demands, which he said were presented as a counter-proposal to the owners' offer on Nov. 17:

- After five years as a professional player, three in the major leagues, a player would become a free agent if he is earning less than the average big league salary now figured around $32,000. After seven years, five in the majors, he would be able to make his own deal if not earning one and a half times the average and after nine years if not making twice the average.
- Regardless of salary, a player would become a free agent after seven, 12 and 17 years in the majors.
- Each year, 10 players from a team's master roster of 40 and five from the varsity roster of 25 would be freed of the reserve clause restrictions.
- If a player and his team have not agreed to a contract by Feb. 1, the dispute would be submitted to binding arbitration.
- If a player is traded, he may ask his new team to reopen contract negotiations. If they fail to agree, the matter goes to binding arbitration.

West-United Plans to Play

Old Man Winter's icy hand has clamped down hard on the outdoor sports scene this weekend in Victoria.

Frozen fields have forced postponement of all Saturday matches in the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association; all Sunday matches in both the Vancouver Island and Victoria and District soccer leagues as well as all weekend action in the Victoria Rugby Union.

Invictus has also postponed, until Dec. 17, a 21-mile mixed medley relay race scheduled for Sunday at Beacon Hill Park.

The only outdoor games still scheduled to go ahead are the Pacific Coast Soccer League encounter on Saturday and two matches in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association on Sunday.

Victoria West-United officials announced Thursday night that they had received permission from the city parks department to use Royal Athletic Park for the 2 p.m. soccer match against New Westminter Blues on Saturday.

Victoria's Gorge Molsons, who took over first place from West-United last weekend, hope to face Norburn the same day in an interlocking match at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Qualicum Club Scorpion Foe

Qualicum College Inn faces Scorpions at 8:30 p.m., Saturday and 2 p.m., Sunday.

Coached by Jim Mant, the up-Islanders have been winning by as much as 45 points in the Port Alberni Senior Men's League.

In preliminary games at 7 p.m., Saturday and 12:30 p.m., Sunday, Victoria First United Saints will tackle North Shore of the Vancouver Junior Women's League.

'Other Three' Hurt Most

Victoria Cougars "had nothing to be ashamed of for 57" but it was the other three minutes that hurt the Cats in Thursday's 8-5 Western Canada Junior Hockey League game at Medicine Hat.

That's how coach Mitch Pechet viewed it after the Tigers struck for three goals within three minutes to turn the game around and pull out a victory for 2,731 hometown fans.

Ahead 4-1 after the first period and still in command, 5-3, at the half-way point of the game, the Cougars were obviously stung by Medicine Hat's three-goal outburst late in the second period.

Don Dziadyk, Carl Cureatuz, Brad Richardson, Dale Cook and Ed Boucha scored for Cougars, playing their third game in as many nights.

It was a mild meeting with only four minor penalties called, two to each team. Dean scored the first of his two goals while Cook was serving one of Victoria's minors, and it was a goal that helped touch off Medicine Hat's second-period outburst.

Tigers counted five of their goals in the second period while out-shooting Cougars 26-12.

Cougars wrap up a three-game Alberta visit by playing the Oil Kings in Edmonton tonight, then return home to face Flin Flon Bombers Sunday in Memorial Arena.

Tigers pulled into a second-place tie with Edmonton Oil Kings as a result of the victory. Oil Kings were knocked out of first place by Brandon Wheat Kings, who scored an 8-5 decision in Edmonton while New Westminster Bruins tripped Flin Flon 6-2.

Referee Darryl Havrelock was pelted with programs and rubber boots with less than three minutes to play when Edmonton fans thought he missed an obvious Brandon penalty.

Edmonton coach Brian Shaw went on the ice, but was restrained by several of his players before reaching Havrelock. Shaw drew a bench minor and game misconduct.

The Death, and Rebirth Of Sinden's Team Canada

"A little piece of us all died today," Coach Harry Sinden of Team Canada said into a tape recorder late one memorable Saturday night in Montreal. How true!

That was Sept. 2, the historic occasion, remember, when shock and dismay spread across the Dominion.

Team Canada, reputedly the best hockey team anywhere, had been soundly thumped by the Russian Nationals, 7-3. Who can even forget it, and the other seven games of the trans-world series, either?

Not many, perhaps, but now for those who may have missed something, it's all in print. Sinden tells it like it was in his revelation "Hockey Showdown," (Doubleday, $6.95 hardcover, $3.95 paperback) a tape report really of how he lived and died every minute and every day of that series.

It's a good, historical account of the entire production, this book, from the pre-series bargaining to the final goal by Paul Henderson which gave Canada victory.

But not be free from embarrassments, such as:

In that first game, the Russians actually laughed at the Canadians, and near the end of the contest when centre Phil Esposito punched a Russian in the face, there was no reprisal, ony a sly grin which obviously implied:

"Look at the scoreboard, you jerk."

Also, if Canada had gone for speed and quickness in the first game, it didn't work. The Russians were still faster, and quicker. They would have to be slowed down. Sinden would have to get the "diggers" into the game — Wayne Cashman, Jean Paul Parise, Bill Goldsworthy. The Soviets would see the other face off the NHL. They did. Canada won Game two, 4-1, and some pride had been salvaged.

U.S. Owners Held All the Cards

And so on, as each game ended, and new plans for the next were devised, Sinden told it all to a tape recorder.

In Vancouver, for instance: "The score, 5-3, was a lot closer than the game." Re the Bobby Hull case, Sinden wanted Hull, but couldn't get him, and put the blame on Clarence Campbell and officials of Hockey Canada for the "NHL-only" situation that existed. Not to forget the U.S. owners.

It was Sinden's view that "for the sake of hockey which I feel should have been the paramount factor, Hull and the others (who had jumped to the WHA) should have been allowed to play."

Then the frank admission:

"But American owners were holding the cards."

On the series generally, Sinden said:

"I'll tell you without any hesitation we were taken by the Russians. How we could ever agree to play them at that time of the year — the worst possible time for Canadians — I'll never know."

Then, there were "The Defectors." And it was here that Sinden's rancor showed. He was positively bitter.

Vic Hadfield, his ego bruised, was asked to leave when he declined Sinden's invitation to return to the club after refusing to be relegated to spot duty.

"Then, you may as well take your stuff off," was Sinden's comment. "I wasn't going to beg him to return."

Some 'Cop-Outs' He Got to Know

Then Buffalo's Rich Martin quit, to be followed by Vancouver's Jocelyn Guevremont, to whom Sinden said: "I'd be happy if you get out of here as quickly as you can." Later, there was Gilles Perrault.

Plus a delightful admission: "Their excuse of 'not being in shape' is simply a cop-out."

Oh sure, all the glories of the eventual victory are recounted, events leading up to them, the final-game referee squabble, game strategies, Alan Eagleson't final fadeout even in the eyes of the Russians; and some incidental and unforgettable occasions — like a luncheon, Russian style.

It happened in Moscow, and after the usual niceities, the toasts followed. To Sinden they were something else.

"The custom in Russia is for each man to toast everyone else. A Russian would toast one of our players . . .

"Bobby Orr . . . zip . . . over the rocks, no ice, no mix, no nothing,straight vodka.

"One of us woild do the same:

"Valeri Kharmalov . . . zip, the same thing, straight!"

"And after a few Kristals (a brand name) it didn't seem all that bad."

Matter of fact, as a statement of record, rather than a literary coup, neither is Sinden's book. I think hockey fans, and Canadians, will enjoy it.

SUSPICION AT TRACK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Star-News says the West Virginia Racing Commission has begun an investigation into the running of the 10th race at Charles Town last Friday night which threatens the track with a major scandal.

The investigation centres on the 10th race trizacta in which a bettor who held a 3-8-1 ticket would have expected to collect a windfall for picking the first three finishers in order.

Andrew Byer, Star-News racing columnist, says trizacta payoffs always are difficult to guess but a bettor might have expected to collect $1,000 to $3,000 or more for his $3 investment.

MIKE WALTON
. . . on scoring streak

Hot Bruins Burn Blues; Tie Rangers

By The Canadian Press

It didn't have the finesse one might find on the ballroom floor of a swank hotel, but the pairings on Boston Garden ice Thursday night were a delight to 15,003 fans.

After a slow start, the defending Stanley Cup champion Bruins have climbed into contention in the National Hockey League East Division. It was their 10th straight game without a loss.

St. Louis Blues were their latest victims, falling 5-0 as Mike Walton continued his latest scoring streak and veteran goaltender Eddie Johnston mastered St. Louis shooters for the second straight game.

The victory edged Boston into a second-place tie with New York Rangers, each with 35 points, four behind division-leading Montreal Canadiens.

In other games, it was Philadelphia Flyers 6, Minnesota North Stars 2; Buffalo Sabres 6, Detroit Red Wings 1; Atlanta Flames 5, Vancouver Canucks 2.

The Bruins, hit hard by losses to the rival World Hockey Association at the start of the season, had little trouble filling the vacancies.

Walton scored two goals against the Blues—his 12th in the last 12 games—and Johnston disciplined St. Louis sticks in turning aside 25 shots. He blanked them 4-0 in their last meeting, Nov. 16.

After a quiet first period, it developed into a typical St. Louis-Boston game after Bruins' Ken Hodge and rookie goaltender Bob Johnson exchanged punches midway into the second period.

Barclay Plager of St. Louis and Phil Esposito were also thumbed for fighting in the final minute of the period, paving the way for two third-period scraps between Boston newcomer Terry O'Reilly and Blues' Floyd Thompson.

The win gave the first-year Flames an 11-13-5 mark for the season.

Scallen Scoffs at Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thomas Scallen, president of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, said Thursday the club is not controlled by any outside interests and is not for sale.

Scallen, in Minneapolis, said in a telephone interview that a report by Toronto newspaper columnist Dick Beddoes that Chicago Black Hawks of the NHL had acquired control of the Canucks was not true.

Beddoes had said the Black Hawks acquired a controlling interest in the Canucks either through ownership of shares in the team or in collateral to pay off a $4-million bank loan to the Bank of British Columbia.

However, Coley Hall, a director of both the Canucks and the bank said the bank had given the team a one-year extension to pay off the loan.

"We borrow money from Wirtz from time to time and we always pay it back.

"We have just concluded refinancing and the club is not for sale."

Mr. Hall said that since the bank had "just renewed the loan this week, I don't think there's anything to that story."

The Canucks are controlled through Medical Investment Corp. of Minneapolis Medicor, which has a 60 per cent share holding in Northwest Sports Enterprises, parent company of the Canucks.

Two weeks ago, Thomas Scallen, president of Medicor and the Canucks, announced that he had privately purchased 100,000 shares in Northwest Sports and first-refusal rights to any other shares offered for sale from the Capozzi family of Kelowna, B.C.

Scallen declined then to say whether his purchase was financed by the NHL, but Hall said the purchase was made through a $1.5 million loan from the Toronto Dominion Bank, which was guaranteed by the NHL.

Hall said the report that the Canucks were controlled by the Black Hawks may have started because Arthur M. Wirtz, owner of the Chicago club, had helped Medicor with its ice show, Holiday on Ice.

The report was just the latest in the tangled financial dealings of the Canucks, which have been prominent on financial pages since Medicor acquired controlling interest in the team before its entrance into the NHL in 1970.

First, money was transferred from Northwest Sports to Medicor to liquidate the Minneapolis company's debts in the United States. Then the Capozzi family lent $4 million to the Canucks in July of 1971 to cover the transferred money.

Then, the Bank of B.C. loan was obtained to pay off the Capozzis.

The Canucks' financial structure isn't threatened. It earns about $2 million annually including $750,000 from television revenue.

CHARLIE HODGE QUITS NATS' COACHING POST

VANCOUVER (CP) — Charlie Hodge said Thursday he has resigned as coach of Vancouver Nats of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Hodge, who watched his team make a quick start and then slump into last place in the league's western division, had coached the club for the last half of last season, when he took over from Alf Cadman.

The Nats have lost 16 of their last 17 games.

Jack Durston, who was coach of the Nats' farm team, Vancouver Villas of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League, will take over the team. Vancouver general-manager Gil Lundihn said Durston would be behind the bench for the game here Friday night against Flin Flon Bombers.

Hodge was a goalie with Montreal Canadiens, Oakland Seals and Vancouver Canucks in the National Hockey League and was a two-time Vezina trophy winner.

Lundihn said Durston's appointment is temporary, and that he also will continue as coach of the Villas.

Nats Battle For Ladies

By The Canadian Press

They billed the game as Ladies' Night at Ottawa's Civic Centre, but it was hardly an exhibition that would woo the ladies.

The hometown Nationals were forced to play catch-up hockey Thursday night when New England Whalers opened an early four-goal lead and finally fell 4-2 in a scrappy contest.

Elsewhere, Cleveland Crusaders kept pace with the Whalers atop the World Hockey Association's Eastern Division by defeating Quebec Les Nordiques 3-1 and Minnesota's Fighting Saints blanked Houston Aeros 3-0.

It was bonus night at fan-starved Civic Centre, but only 2,682 fans showed up in the 9,000-seat rink despite free admission to any ladies accompanied by a male companion.

Those that did make it to the arena saw a no-holds barred fight in the second period between Whalers' Tom Webster, who opened the New England scoring, and Tom Simpson of Ottawa.

The fight ended when Webster decked the Ottawa player, but the altercation signified a change in the trend of the contest.

City Pairs Claim Titles

Sisters Debbie and Maralee Bray easily claimed the senior ladies' pairs by scoring 42.8 points and five ordinals to beat out Dawn Nott and Vicki Nicholl of Glengarry Club.

Another Racquet club combination to win on home ice, Sharon Hallett and Leonard Scharbach, captured the pre-novice pairs crown as clubmates finished second and third — but mainland skaters held the upper hand in six other divisions.

It proved to be a disappointing day for Victoria's entries in the singles. Former Canadian junior champion Paul Fisher, Brenda Thomas and Dale Gorcak all placed behind the leaders after their figures.

Gorcak finished second behind Michael Moewes of the Gulf of Georgia Club in the pre-novice men's singles figures, Fisher was fourth in the men's singles while Miss Thomas was in third place.

Stockers Stretch Lead

Stockers North Americans padded a first-place lead to eight points Thursday night by hammering runner-up Ingraham Buckaroos 9-0 in a Victoria Intermediate Hockey League battle at Pearkes Arena.

Laurie Huck, each time on a breakaway, Don Presley, Errol Goulden and Dave Williams each scored two goals for Stockers.

Tom Tillotson, one of three players brought up from Saanich Block Brothers, the Stockers' South Island Junior "B" League affiliate, added the single and assisted on three of the other tallies.

Ken Olson had a relatively easy time recording the shutout with 22 saves. At the other end of the ice, Ron Griffis knocked aside 32 shots.

Bombers Score on Ballots

MONTREAL (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who put the most points up on the scoreboard this season, have placed the most players aboard the Canadian Football League All-Canada team.

The team, chosen by ballot of the Football Reporters of Canada was announced Thursday by FRC president Pierre Proulx.

The Bombers took six of the 25 spots — there was a tie for tight end — five on offence and one on defence.

Don Jonas won the quarterback position 23 to 18 over Chuck Ealey of Hamilton Tiger-Cats. Mack Herron, runner-up in voting as most valuable player in Canada last week, was the only unanimous choice, winning top spot among the three running backs.

OFFENCE

Wide receivers — Garney Henley, Hamilton; Jim Young, B.C.
Tight end — Peter Dalla Riva, Montreal; Tony Gabriel, Hamilton.
Guards — Bob Lueck, Winnipeg; Jack Abendschan, Saskatchewan.
Tackles — Bill Frank, Winnipeg; Ed George, Montreal.
Centre — Bob Swift, Winnipeg.

DEFENCE

Tackles — Jim Stillwagon, Toronto; John Helton, Calgary.
Ends — Bill Baker, Saskatchewan; Wayne Smith, Ottawa.
Middle linebacker — Gerry Campbell, Ottawa, Ottawa.
Backs — Al Brenner, Hamilton; Johnny Williams, Hamilton; Grady Cavness, Winnipeg; Dick Adams, Ottawa; Mary Luster, Toronto.

Every team won at least one all-star spot. Hamilton was right behind Winnipeg with five; Saskatchewan Roughriders and Ottawa Rough Riders had three each; British Columbia Lions, Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts each put two aboard, while Calgary Stampeders, and Edmonton Eskimos took one position each.

Freezing Northeasterlies Doesn't Stop Steelheaders

All except for those crazy steelhead anglers!

When normal people are huddled by the fireside, repairing gear and muttering into a hot toddy, steelheaders are out on snowshoes and battling iced-up lines for a chance to catch one of these sea-run rainbows.

As Arnie Williams of Duncan said: "If he's not freezing to death, he's not happy."

The San Juan River-Harris Creek system is in fishable condition and a few anglers have been striking it lucky.

Waters are slightly low and clear, but still in prime condition, in the lower reaches of the Cowichan River and the Koksilah lacks enough water to be productive.

Further up-Island, the odd steelhead has been taken out of the Stamp and Little Qualicum rivers as well as the lower part of the Somass.

Peter Patrick of Courtenay, who arrived home with a 14-pounder, was one of the fortunates fishing the controlled-flow waters of the Puntledge River this past week.

Campbell River seems to be the only stream still producing steelhead in that general vicinity, where freezing temperatures have radically lowered stream levels.

The only spots on the Island suggested as possible trout angling meccas have been Brannen and Westwood lakes near Nanaimo, where cold-fingered fly fishermen have been hauling out several limits.

And as for salmon fishing, the winter springs are undoubtedly out there — if you care to try for them.

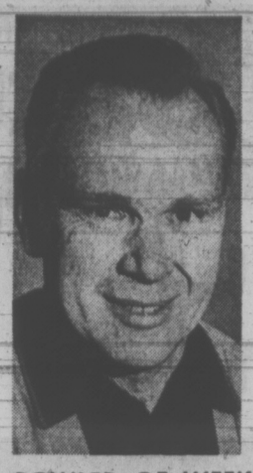
NIBBLES: This week's nosegay of thorns goes to the federal fisheries department . . . This sanctimonious body has asked that a meeting with the Amalgamated Conservation Society, scheduled for January after being postponed earlier this month, be off-limits to the press . . . Supposedly the theory behind this move, which the ACS will undoubtedly have to honor in order to have the meeting, is that the dialogue can be more free . . . It's understandable that they don't want to air their dirty laundry in public, but one mustn't lose sight of the fact that we, the public, pay the departmental representatives' salaries . . . There should be no room for prima donna tactics among employees of a government branch that regulates activities of vital interest to both sports and commercial fishermen.

Outdoorsmen are again reminded of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association turkey shoot Saturday and Sunday at the club's Goldstream layout. . . . Hours are from 9 a.m. 'til dark each day . . . Included in the competition are trap shooting, archery, .22 rifle running deer, lucky wheels and lucky circles.



BOWLER OF WEEK

Improving with each game, George Waugh topped men's fivepin division in ninth week of annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. George earned weekly award as he rolled 280-306-329—915 series in Monday Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

New Storm Hits Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, accused commissioner Bowie Kuhn Thursday of making a fraudulent statement and said player negotiations had been set back by "an act that only the most rank amateur would perform."

Miller said he was referring to a news conference held by the commissioner in Hawaii Nov. 29 at which, he insisted, Kuhn violated an understanding between owners' and players' negotiating committees to resolve their problems privately and not in a public forum.

"Not only has Mr. Khun shown questionable integrity in breaking that agreement," said Miller, "he has performed an extremely destructive act in terms of negotiations."

Kuhn had no immediate comment.

Miller called a news conference to detail some of the facets of the latest conflict which he had touched upon informally a week ago.

"The commissioner's act has only served to harden the players' position," he added.

He declined, however, to predict that baseball may again be hit by a players' strike such as the unprecedented action last spring that delayed opening of the regular season 10 days.

"A strike occurs only when there is a complete falldown of negotiations, when there is an impasse.

"We have not reached that stage yet. We are still negotiating. It is our hope that we can still reach an amicable nd practical agreement. We have another meeting scheduled next Tuesday."

He said that, at the Hawaii news conference, Kuhn outlined an owners' proposal for modifying the stringent reserve clause, which binds a player to one club for life unless he is sold or traded. Kuhn said the players had rejected the plan, which he labelled historic and spectacular.

"Those words were clearly intended to deceive the public and players," Miller said. "His predictions of catastrophe if the terms were not accepted were a transparent and inept attempt to psych the players and the fans."

The owners' proposal, as presented by Kuhn, called for free agent status for any player with five years' major league experience not offered at least $30,000 for his sixth year or a player of eight years' experience not offered $40,000 for his ninth year.

"Were it presently in effect, this magnanimous offer would probably affect five of the 960 players now on major league rosters," Miller said.

Miller said the owners actually were offering the players salary increase of one-half of one per cent, and even less than that if owners were allowed to go through with the suggestion that rosters be cut from 25 to 23 men.

He charged that baseball salaries fall below those in the other major professional sports — football, basketball and hockey — and cited the National Basketball Association's minimum of $20,000 compared with baseball's $14,000 as an example.

"We are seeking a base pay of $15,500 in 1973, then $16,500 in 1974 and $17,500 in 1975," Miller said.

"These are not unreasonable demands. Most people are brainwashed with the idea that pro sports don't make money."

Miller outlined other player demands, which he said were presented as a counter-proposal to the owners' offer on Nov. 17:

- After five years as a professional player, three in the major leagues, a player would become a free agent if he is earning less than the average big league salary now figured around $32,000. After seven years, five in the majors, he would be able to make his own deal if not earning one and a half times the average and after nine years if not making twice the average.
- Regardless of salary, a player would become a free agent after seven, 12 and 17 years in the majors.
- Each year, 10 players from a team's master roster of 40 and five from the varsity roster of 25 would be freed of the reserve clause restrictions.
- If a player and his team have not agreed to a contract by Feb. 1, the dispute would be submitted to binding arbitration.
- If a player is traded, he may ask his new team to reopen contract negotiations. If they fail to agree, the matter goes to binding arbitration.

Qualicum Club Scorpion Foe

Qualicum College Inn faces Scorpions at 8:30 p.m., Saturday and 2 p.m., Sunday.

Coached by Jim Mant, the up-Islanders have been winning by as much as 45 points in the Port Alberni Senior Men's League.

In preliminary games at 7 p.m., Saturday and 12:30 p.m., Sunday, Victoria First United Saints will tackle North Shore of the Vancouver Junior Women's League.

West-United Plans to Play

Frozen fields have forced postponement of all Saturday matches in the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association; all Sunday matches in both the Vancouver Island and Victoria and District soccer leagues as well as all weekend action in the Victoria Rugby Union.

Invictus has also postponed, until Dec. 17, a 21-mile mixed medley relay race scheduled for Sunday at Beacon Hill Park.

The only outdoor games still scheduled to go ahead are the Pacific Coast Soccer League encounter on Saturday and two matches in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association on Sunday.

Victoria West-United officials announced Thursday night that they had received permission from the city parks department to use Royal Athletic Park for the 2 p.m. soccer match against New Westminter Blues on Saturday.

Victoria's Gorge Molsons, who took over first place from West-United last weekend, hope to face Norburn the same day in an interlocking match at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.
